Pugilistic encounters, dog fights, cock fights and similar performances were the ordinary forms of popular pastimes in the early part of the last Leo Furlong, Stan Mr. Druken, Mrs. Clancy, Fred. Hickey, E. Malone, Leo Dunne, T. J. century. Bull baiting was common and even this did not afford sufficient amusement to the people in some of the northern towns, and Blackburn and Oldham exhibited a strange depravity by compelling old women to

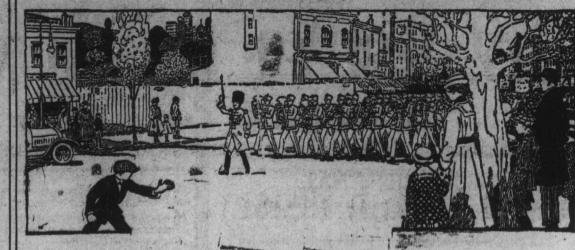

> In the eighteenth century dancing and card playing were the two chief amusements of the court and the fashionable world. Cheating at cards was not only tolerated, but admired as clever and smart. Fancy dress balls were very popular in the olden days, but they do not appear to have been carried out with as much propriety as in our times Every effort was made to confine the audience to "the quality," and to prevent drunkenness and disorder, but without success. As for dancing, it was like cards, "a diversion for grave and gay alike." Men did not stand out half the programme in those days; they were as keen for the dance as

The love of monstrosities, which are usually mere freaks of nature, is still common; but it would appear to have been more popular in the good old times. In the year 1742 crowds frequented the Mitre, Charing Cross, to view "the largest Thames monster. or miraculous man eater, that was ever in the world. As a boy was washing his mop this surprising monster caught hold of it in his mouth, and had very like to pull the boy into the river, but he calling out for help, several men came to his assistance, with great difficulty dragged this monster out, and he lived four hours

Then follows a descriptive account of this "strange fish," which, we are assured, "has two very plain hands, eight fingers and two thumbs, and nails on each like a Christian; he has four horns on his head, and other weapons on his back," and so on. ame place, and among these "the ious lock of hair cut off a gentle an's head, as much approve f. that the whole world is challe

"Here They Come!"

It is the cry of the children when a band is heard far down the street. Nearer and nearer it draws until each note becomes clearer and clearer.

To those in the city this is a familiar picture. But to those residing in suburban towns stirring strains of band music are more rare.

The NEWEE "The Phonograph with a Soul

in your home makes it possible for you and your children to have at all times the wonderful march music that has inspired the world.

Wherever you live—on the farm or in town—let the New Edison bring the parade, with all its glamour, into your living room, every instrument, every note as clear as a real band-thanks to the genius of Thomas A. Edison.

> We tell a wonderful sto y about the New Edison in a beautiful book that you should have. It is called "Edison and Music". Ask for it; and also for "What the Critics Say".
