We give here a beverage easily made, and which cost next to nothing, one which quenches the thirst without producing any unpleasant results; on the contrary it makes a very healthy drink, and one which will save you much in the way of doctor's bills.

At the annual meeting of the Oxford Beckepers' Association held at Woodstock last week, President F. A. Gemmill, of Stratford, who presided, was re-elected president. A resolution was passed in lavor of publishing a bee journal. S. M. Doolittle's paper on "Queens" elicited the most general and intelligent opinions. The leading question in the paper was, "Is there such a thing as a queen in a colony of bees?" Themajority ofthose present thought that considering a queen a ruler, a governor or a sovereign, there was no such thing as a queen among bees. A colony of bees is a mother bee, nothing more, nothing less. It was proved quiet conclusively that the neutral or worker bees rule the colony, and not the queen. Another very interesting question was, "Does the queen lay the egg in prepared queen cells?" No one had ever seen a queen lay an egg in such a cell.
