Boycott and Blockade. Washington, Jan. 26.—It is more im probable than ever that France will institute a blockade against the ports of Venezuela, large and small. In fact, her representative has been discussing with the state department and with the President a scheme of laying an embargo against Venezuelan goods as the most effective means of bringing President Castro to realize of M. Taigny. What this will mean to Venezuela is shown by figures from a diplomatic source. In 1903 the general imports of France from Venezuela, and these include goods which were bought by other countries, but shipped through that country, amounted to $5,082,300. The following years the amount was $6,661,400. The goods actually consumed in France during these years were worth respectively, $2,227,200 and $2,-934,000. It may be said that these amounts include coffee as their bulk, while the remainder is largely made up of pearls. During the same years the general exports from France to Venezuela are represented by the sums $284,700 and $673,000, while of these goods actually consumed in Venezuela he amounts are $193,200 and $346,000. This statement shows very closely that in a commercial war between France and Venezuela the South American country has far the more to the best customer for coffee raised in the West Indies and the countries which border upon the Caribbean Sea. It was the complaint of Puerto Rico against the United States that her transfer from the Spanish flag to that of this country had deprived her of her former market in Spain, to which she went through French ports, and had failed to provide her with a compensatory market here.

NATURE'S SWEET SCENTS

Nearly everybody likes the delightful fragrance of an old-fashioned flower garden. There's an indescribable, fresh, spicy odor to the combination of scents that is most gratifying to the sense of smell.

Nature is certainly the best perfumer. But the perfumers who make the extracts we carry pretty make the extracts we carry pretty nearly reach nature's high stan-dard, for they make these perfumes from essences of the real flowers— flowers grown in different climes. Odors range from 25c an ounce to $2.
