CHRISTIANITY.—Like a very child, goes wandering over the wild world. Fearless in its huncence, it is not abashed before prin-ces, nor conformed by the wisdom of synods. Before it the blood stained warrior sheaths his sword, and plucks the laural from his his sword, and plucks the laural from his in the midst of privations, and leaves hehind an everlasting blessing. It walks through, the cities, amid their imaginable pride, and
