THE CONVENTION.

When the Provincial Association of the Protestant Teachers of Quebec decided last year to hold their annual convention for 1887 in the town of Huntingdon, there were some who had misgivings in regard to its suitability as a centre for such a gathering. These misgivings, as it now happily appears, were ill-founded, inasmuch as the convention of this year takes rank among the most successful in the history of the association. The Executive Committee had made arrangements with one or two educationists who labor beyond the limits of our province to address the convention, and the assistance thus received helped to swell the programme a little beyond the usual length. The several meetings were held in Moir's Hall, a very convenient place for such gatherings. The arrangements made by the local committee of management seem to have given every satisfaction; indeed, much of the success of the convention was doubtless due to the people of Huntingdon, who offered so freely of their hospitality to the teachers in attendance. The Montreal newspapers had representatives at the meetings, who, with the editor of the Huntingdon Gleaner, have already given, in extenso, excellent reports of the proceedings to the public. From the interesting account of the convention published in the Gazette, we have been largely guided in making our synopsis of the principal events.
