Capital, therefore, is produced by labour. Labour is simply tollsome work, which is generally performed under the direction of bosses or task-masters and is rewarded by drafts on the fruits of previous labour or Capital. Labour, therefore, is sustained by Capital. Capital and Labour are inter-dependents.

The custodians of Capital may abuse their position and grind the faces of labourers; and, labourers may form trades-unions and organize strikes; but, abour and capital will not quarrel any more than man will quarrel with his meals. Cheapside believes in paying labour handsomely, as no country can be prosperous without well paid labourers.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY CELEBRA-TIONS CONTINUED.

Grand President, Mr. McEvenue, and Messrs. T. Bowes, Murney, Boyle, members of the order, and the leader of the Bands Ville Marie.

During the procession some 80 policemen, in detachments of tens and twelves, patrolled the streets in the immediate vicinity in order to nip any disturbance in the bud should such unfortunately arise. The day passed away quietly and nothing occurred to disturb the public peace.

MONDAY EVENING.

CONCERT OF THE ST. PATRICK'S SOCIETY IN THE THEATRE.

St. Patrick's Day having fallen on Sunday, many of the Associations decided upon celebrating it yesterday, and in our own city the St. Patrick's Society held their annual concert in the Theatre Royal, while in the City Hall was given a grand ball, held under the auspices of the Catholic Union. We give below a resume of the celebration in and out of town .-

THEATRE ROYAL.

The St. Patrick's Society's Grand Annual Concert and Dramatic Entertainment came off last evening before a large audience. The curtain being raised, exposed to view B. Devlin, Esq., M.P., President of the Society, supported by Mayor Beaudry, F. Heffernan, of St. Bridget's, and the Presidents of various other Irish Societies. After an overture by the

B. Devlin, Esq., M.P., President of the Society, addressed the audience in a short speech : Ladies and Gentlemen,-As the President of St. Patrick's Society, it is my duty to bid you welcome. I am extremely glad to see so many of my friends present, and that we have such a number here on the occasion of our national concert, and I trust that everything will prove satisfactory and that all will be entertained. I am obliged to abstain from making a lengthy speech, as for the last two or three days I have been suffering from a bad cold, and therefore I trust you will excuse me, more especially as you will have a workingman from the other side of the Atlantic to address you. He will tell you that he is a workingman, and I know of no other man that has such confidence on the subject he will speak upon as Mr. O'Leary. However, you can judge for yourselves when you hear him speak.

Mr. Peter O'Leary addressed the audience in a short speech, as follows:-Chairman, Ladies and Gentleman,-After the flattering and kind manner in which I have been introduced to all present, I feel rather diffident in addressing you, more especially as public speaking is like all other qualifications, requiring an amount of use and practice to make it perfect. But as I have been kindly introduced as a workingman are not usually orators, I hope you will bear with any little defects that I may happen to make. A working man has so much business and toil to do, in order to gain a livehood, that he has seldom the the time to make himself proficient in any particular qualification. A few days ago I was starting for the East, when the Committee of this Association asked me to remain and address you, on the occasion of their Grand Annaul Concert. I did so, and have now the present pleasure. During the last four or five years. I have travelled extensively in England and Ireland, in the United States and Canada, from the Pacific to the Atlantic. I have seen this confederation of yours, and I say emphatically that no 4½ millions of people-I don't say it for flatteryfor I am not one that flatters—but I say it without fear of contradiction, that no 4½ millions of people have made such progress during the last twenty years as you have; you have 5,000 miles of rail-ways, 2,000 miles of commerce, communication from ocean to ocean, a splendid postal system, the telegraph all but spans your entire Dominion, you have good municipal and civil laws, in fact, everything that makes a country prosperous and contented; therefore I say, "Be true and loyal to the Confederation of Canada." There are a great variety of institutions at home. You that have travelled have seen the baronial halls and the cotter's hut side by side; but go to England and you will see the difference, differences not compatible with Christianity. It is surprising that wherever the Irish race have taken root outside of of the old country, to what an extent of prosperity they attain. Take the eight and a half millions in the United States, and say a quarter million in Canada; when I mention these numbers, I do not specify religious, but the Irish of all denominations, all those who claim Ireland as the land of their birth or that of their forefathers; see what good citizens they make, shoulder to shoulder with men of all nationalities, upholding the name and honor of their country, not only collectively, but individually. The reason that we don't make progress at home is that we have so self government How would you like a man to come into your house and tell you to do this or do that, under pain of severe The Irish at home have laws made for them which are totally incompatible with their nature, but they This is harsh, and what makes the Irishman penalties? Why, I think you would put him out have either to put up with them or leave the couneither a rebel or a discontented subject. To illustrate shortly the benefit of self goverment, let us take Belgium; before 1832 it was simply a poor province of Holland, in 1832 it adopted its present constitution under Lepold, and is now one of the most prosperous and flourishing kingdoms in Europe for its extent. Take an instance during the Franco Prussian war, Bourbaki is making a stand at Belfort; the Germans, under Werder, are pressing him hard, he eventually retreats in disorder over the Swiss frontier, and is pursued by the Pruseian army. What do the noble Switzers do, they send word to Werder that if he dare cross their frontier in pursuit of the poor famished and disorganized French, they will oppose him with 70,000 free Switzers. All this is the result of selfgovernment. Come with me in imagination to the old country and you will see a different state of things. I have seen the very crows taking the potatoes out of the field, the corn out of the farmers' barns, and he would have nothing to throw at them but a stone. I have heard Englishmen say, that Britons never shall be slaves." I am proud of this boast, for, although Irish I was brought up in England, but my English friends should also allow the Irish to have the same aspirations. Is there a Scotchman whose blood does not tingle at the name of Bannockburn, or at the words of that natural gifted poet Babbie Burns "Scots wha ha'e with Wallace bled." Surely, with such feelings as these, they will allow us the same privileges and let by Father Berriman, of Toronto, giving a brief us recall the past deeds of our ancient forefathers. The Itish have ever shown themselves a gallant nation, on many a blood-stained field they have shown their valour and prowess. The drama that is to be performed to night will show you how a young enthusiast, an Irish Protestant, Emmet, was dealt with. What did he say when on the scaffold? he raised his manacled hands up to Heaven and exclaimed, "God Save Ireland." These are the orles that emanate from the heart of every true

man. What did Marshal Ney say at Waterloo, when at the final advance of the French was asked to surender. "The Guard dies, but never surenders."

Napoleon at the critical moment of one of his battles, places himself at the head of the army.

the men revive at the sight of their beloved chief.

says, "Up, Guards, and at them." Surely, if England and other nations are proud of perpetuating such incidents, so are we also proud to do the same with our fore-fathers. I trust that what I have said may be appreciated, and the youth present may be benefited by it. Let, them read the newspapers, books, and all literature that they can spare time to do. This is an age of enlightment, of thought, of telegraphs and telephones, of steam by land and sea; let them read of the past and the present; let them come out and show that the rish race are worthy of being considered good and faithful citizens. Many thanks for the courtesy you have shown me this night. I will once more state, that in case of any defect in my short address that I am but simply a working man, and I trust that at least you will give me credit for being sincere, and that I stand up honestly and manfully for the cause I advocate.

The paogramme of the concert was creditably carried out. The second part which consisted of the drama of "Robert Emmett" was then performed very successfully, all the characters being well represented, and being well up in their parts.

The St. Patrick's Society and Irish Catholic Union elebrated the anniversary of their patron Saint by a grand procession to-day. The only Irish society that did not take part was the St. Patrick's Literary Association, they having had some difference with the others. Notwithstanding this division, the procession was the largest seen here for some time. Grand Mass was said at St. Patrick's Church, the sermon being delivered by Father O'Connor. Everything passed off in a most orderly manner. This evening there were two concerts held, the Literary Society in the Opera House, and the St. Parrick's Society and Catholic Union in the Canadian Institute. At the former there was a good attendance, the house being comfortably filled. Mr. Waller, the President, occupied the chair, and on the platform were Hon. A. Mackenzie, Senator Power, Hon. B. W. Scott, Hon. W. Laurier and Speaker Anglin, each of whom gave short addresses. The Canadian Institute was the main attraction, and the spacious theatre was crowded to its fullest capacity. Mr. P. Baskerville, President St. Patrick's Society, occupied the chair, and on the platform were Rt. Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald, Senators Carroll, Howlan, Skead and Girard, Messrs. Costigan M.P., Plumb, M.P., Bunster, M.P., Thompson, M.P., (Cariboo) J. M. Currier, M.P., Alonzso Wright, M.P., McDenald, M.P., (Cape Breton) Hon. John O'Connor, Sheriff Powell, D. J. O'Donoghoe, M.P.P., D. O'Connor, Father O'Connor, Vicar-General Jouvent, C. H. Mackintosh, Ald. Chabot and several others. After the Chairman's opening address, and a few remarks from Hon. John. O'Connor,

Sir John Macdonald was called upon, and on advancing to respond, was greeted with most enthusiastic applause, the entire audience rising to their feet and cheering again and again. The Rt. Hon. gentleman said he always felt at home among Irish. men. (Hear, hear.) His old friend and colleague, Mr. O'Connor, had spoken of the wit and wisdom of Irishmen, and that island had produced some of the greatest men of the world. He thought that the good people of Scotland were akin to the Irish, but still he did not hold to the idea that Ireland was peopled from Scotland. If St. Patrick was a Scotchman, and he didn't believe he was, he was none the worse for it. (Laughter.) He congratulated the Irishmen resident in Canada upon the names they had made for themselves. The old grievances of Irishmen were wearing out, and he hoped that 'ere long Irishmen would indeed be free-free to live in unity with their brethern, with a common love of their own old country. He was glad to see there was not such a disposition to "agree to disagree" as there used to be in days gone by. He paid a high tribute to the character of the Irish for their social qualities, and said that nothing could give him greater pleasure than to be with them that evening. He thought that there was a glorious future for Ireland. It was not the same country it was fifty years ago. There had been a progress made there which augured for its future. One of the greatest pleasures be ever experienced when he was a young man was to listen to the eloquence of the liberator, Mr. Daniel O'Connell in the British House of Commons. It was on the Maynooth grant question. He should never forget seeing the portly form of Mr. O'Connell rise to deliver one of the most beautiful speeches he ever heard in his life. O'Connell possessed the true spirit of oratory. Sir John then alluded to the wit and eloquence of Sheridan, as especially shown in his speech in the English House of Commons, relative to the natives of India, and concluded a most eloquent speech by expressing a hope that he had not weared them by what he termed his discursive remarks. The right hon, gentleman resumed his seat amid loud applause. Several other gentlemen present delivered short addresses, and a most successful musical programme was carried out to perfection, the large gathering dispersing shortly before midnight, evidently thoroughly satisfied with the manner in which they had celebrated the day.

TORONTO.

To night O'Donovan Rossa spoke for an hour and a half before an audience of 150 persons, in St Lawrence Hall. His rewarks were not as treason able as was expected, although he declared that he was doing all in his power to liberate Ireland, and he was prepared to meet England with the same weapons which England had used against Iroland. While he was speaking, about a dozen penes of glass were broken by stones thrown by the crowd which was assembled outside. The crowd numbered about six thousand persons, but they were kept comparative quiet by a large detachment of the police force. Several of the latter were wounded. and among them were constables Worth, Johnson and Woodhouse. About eleven o'clobk the crowd dispersed, many of them making their way to Owen Cosgrove's, Queen street, where riots have taken place on several occasions heretofore. Pistol shots and stones were fired by both parties, and in the thickest of the action as many as fifty reports were heard within five minutes, Wm. McClegg, John McConnell, Samuel Archer and Edward Foley received pistol shots, and were more or less injured, although not fatally. The police here were fired on by both Orangemen and Catholics, but none were seriously injured.

ST. CATHARINES.

Yesterday the Sons of St. Patrick colebrated the day here in a very quiet way. There was no at-tempt at demonstation, except the religious services with which the name of St. Patrick is immediately associated. A very eloquent lecture was delivered sketch of the life and labors of St. Patrick,

HALIFAX.

The celebration of St. Patrick's day commenced thalf past twelve this morning, by a grand torchlight pocession of the Emereld Club. They started from Irishtown accompanied by three bands of music, and marched through the principal streets, escorted by an immense crowd of spectators. The display was one of the finest of the kind ever made here. At nine o'clock the Charitable Irish Society formed in procession, and marched to St. Marv's Cathedral, where divine service was held, after which the procession re-formed and paraded several streets, The bands of music, handsome banners and regalla of the members, succeeded in making a good dis-play, notwithstanding that the procession took place Wellington at the supreme moment of Waterloo, in the midst of a driving snew storm, religius service and street parade. The President and Secretary Schurz reviewed St. Patrick's day procession, and were saluted by each organization.

Everything is peaceful.

NEW YORK.

The St. Patrick's day parade passed off quietly. The weather was black and cold. The procession was not as large as in former years. In Brooklyn the parade has dwindled down to a mere handful on account of dissensions in the organization. Doubtless this will be the last St. Patrick's Day parade in Brooklyn, as the custom is growing more unpopular every year.

SAN FRANCISCO.

San Francisco, March 18 .- St. Patrick's Day was celebrated by a procession and literary exercises.

THANKS.

At the last meeting of the Young Irishmen's L. & B. Association, a vote of thanks was passed to the members of the St. Jean Baptiste Infantry Company, who kindly assisted in the celebration of Emmet's Centenary, in the Theatre Royal.

I. C. B. U. BRANCH NO 23 ERINSVILLE, ONT. At a special meeting of the above society held at their hall on Monday evening, March 11th 1878 the following resolutions were adopted: --Whereas by the will of Divine Providence John

J. Stewart a member of this Society has been re-moved by death from this earth to the untried realties of the future we deem it a duty we owe to the respect of the memory to therefore Resolve-That while we willingly submit to the decrees of Almighty God, whose ways are inscrutable and mysterious, nevertheless we teelingly express our profound sorrow for the death of Brother John J. Stewart, who was a promising member of this Society, a true patriot, and lover of freedom, ever ready to sacrifice all but principle for right and justice He is gone from our midst, yet we cannot but express our deepest sorrew for one who endeared himself to theis organization.

And be it further Resolved-That as a Society we tender our heart-felt sympathy and condolence to the bereaved parents and relatives of our departed Brother, assuring them that the good mutual will and harmony that existed between this Society and the deceased will remain young in our memories. notes circulated in Pictou. In the Magistrate's Court next morning it came out that there are three men in the business, and a quantity of bad money was found in Chisholm's possession.

The Oldest Bisour.—Our contemporary L'Even-ement is mistaken in saying that since the death of of the Pope the oldest Catholic bishop is Mgr. Feron, of Clermont, who has been a member of the episcopacy for forty-five years. The fact is that the Liou of the Fold," the immortal John MacHale, Archbishop of Tuam is the oldest bishop for he has been governing the church of which he is an ornament for over fifty-one yesrs.

Shameful.—The citizens of London Ont., are greatly excited concerning the Hargeaves torture case. The man J. H. Hargreaves, was proceeded against by Summous, in the Annie Sparks case. He
