THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

Fears that the financial strain which became so acute early last spring would cause a more general disturbance have fortunately not been realized. A sharp contraction in credits ruption. That this has not been more pronounced in Canada is due in a large measure to the precautions which were taken by the banks and other financial institutions, who were fully cognizant of the distress signals hoisted at London and other of the leading sions of critical or scientific research, financial centres.

The world's business is now admitted to have outgrown its capital. A merchant or manufacturer who has reached a similar condition has only one recourse-that of curtailment in expenditures until a period of recuperation has permitted of an accumulation of funds that will allow of a renewed expansion.
