ANOTHER YORK BATTALION

That there is considerable enthusiasm in the regiment for an active rebuilding campaign was evidenced last night by the substantial number of new re-cruits signed on. The carnival to be held tonight at the Arena, under the 109th Regiment auspices, promises to be a great suc-cess. From present indications and the demand for tickets there will be a

Albert Foster, 92 Sydenham street

The French war office gave out the following report yesterday afternoon: "Operations on the part of the ar-tille y on both sides were light over the whole front except to the north of Verdun, where there was some activi-ty. In the Artois district, to the north-west of Hill No. 140, the enemy attempted, without success, two local attacks with grenades. "A squadron of five French aero-planes bombarded the munitions de-pots of the enemy at Chateau de Martincourt and at Azoudonga (southwest and southeast of Dieuze).

Turkish army sent up from Constantinople to fight with any advantage. * * * *

It is believed in some quarters that Russia, for the present at any rate, plans to make Turkey her principal theatre of action under her most brilliant general and that the Russians may even push on to Constantinople so as to do their part in extinguishing the Moslem power and the pan-Islamic propaganda. The Grand Duke in pushing his Cossacks south is simply deploying his army which is expected soon to extend its lines into the open plains of Syria and Mesopotamia.

In moving two votes of credit for $2,100,000,000 to finance the war to the end of March, and to give it a good start in the new fiscal year, Premier Asquith said that it is costing approximately $15,000,000 a day to furnish the army and navy with munitions and guns, and that the outlay on the war has mounted to $25,000,000 a day.

The immense sum that is being spent in munitions and guns is called for by the needs of new ships which have been and are being added to the navy, and by the expense of providing guns for the new armies. These forces probably require from 15,000 to 20,000 guns.

Reginald McKenna, chancellor of the exchequer, said that by the end of May the war would have cost the British Empire, in round numbers, ten billions of dollars. "It is an absolute marvel," said he, "that after 18 months of war, we are still almost the only open gold country in the world. Our paper can be exchanged for gold at the bank. Every sovereign in paper money has gold back of it. It would never have been believed two years ago that British credit could stand the extraordinary test to which it has been subjected." He had no doubt that a year hence he should be able to show that British credit was still unimpaired.

The need for the immense expenditure is partly owing to lack of peace expenditure in preparation of arms and equipment for war. Germany had in advance arms for her millions, she had a great store of munitions. All these things had to be provided by Britain after the war began. On the other hand, it may be said, with some truth, that arms and equipment provided beforehand for this war would have been semi-obsolete, such immense improvements in them have already been made.

The bulk of Kitchener's new armies is about ready to take the field. Instead of giving the men a six months' training, as laid down in the regulations for recruits during peace times, Kitichener, mindful of the halftrained recruits that previous war ministers had sent out to him in his campaigns, and of the highly paid yeomanry that was sent out to South Africa and did not know how to ride, has not let a single division of his new forces take the field under a year's full training, and he has seen that each division has been properly trained. The instruction which has been given to these organizations has been equal to a two years' training in times of peace, and the heart of the army is as sound as a bell. The men require only brief experience to be as excellent as any army which has ever left Britain's shores. The army contains the best manhood of the nation, thoroly imbued with a sense of the greatness of the British cause, which is one that transcends in morality the cause of the Northern States in the American Civil War.

"The despatch of reinforcements to General Aylmer, who is going to the relief of Kut-el-Amara, is proceeding satisfactorily," says an official report concerning the British operations in Mesopotamia, that was made public in London last night. The presence of aeroplanes with the Turkish forces was made known by the dropping of bombs on the camp at Kut-el-Amaga, doing no damage. In a reconnaissance over the advanced positions of the Turks, situated at a point east of Suez, a British aviator descended to a height of 600 feet over El Hassana and destroyed the Turkish power station with a 100-pound bomb. * * * *

No fewer than six German aeroplanes and one Zeppelin were brought down by French airmen and French anti-aircraft batteries yesterday. One of the aeroplanes was a Fokker. French airmen also raided several depots of the enemy, and a British flying squadron bombarded the important railway junction of Don, doing great damage to the storehouse filled with German military supplies. The Zeppelin that was brought down fell wrapped in flames.

The French nipped in the bud a German attack which was being developed on a front of about four and a third miles in the Lihons sector, south of the Somme. It had been prepared for by an intense bombardment and the emission of clouds of asphyxiating gas, but the hostile infantry was checked by French barrier and infantry fire. In the course of a bombardment of the German trenches about Hulluch and north of the Ypres-Comines Canal British howitzers caused a heavy explosion in the German gun positions in the Radinghem area.

STATIONARY ENGINEERS' DEPT.

Editor World: I note in your issue of the 19th inst. an article speaking of the probable reorganization of the stationary engineers' department, and I must say, speaking as an engineer, both marine and stationary, that this in indeed a step in the right direction, as our present Ontario license law is a farce, more or less. As to sending the new head of the department to foreign countries in search of information, that is totally un-necessary, as we have from the departsearch of information, that is totally un-necessary, as we have from the depart-ment of marine and fisheries very effi-cient inspection laws covering marine boliers, and the bolier inspectors, as everyone must admit, certainly see that the laws are lived up to an denforced.
