The big event of the week has been the official announcement that the government is to take over the Grand Trunk Railway System of Canada and its unfortunate child, the Grand Trunk Pacific. In comparison with this everything else that has happened this week seems unimportant. It means that we are to have a big national railway with a commanding position in every part of the country. Full credit will be given to Hon. Arthur Meighen, Sir Thomas White, Sir Henry Drayton and others who have labored to bring this about. Quite naturally the government will take, and is entitled to take, whatever glory attaches to the nationalization of the Grand Trunk. Whether Sir Robert Borden be a recent or even reluctant convert to public ownership or no, is unimportant. The fact remains that tremendous strides toward complete railway nationalization have been made in this country since his accession to office nine years ago. The announcement comes at an opportune time, and it is more than suspected that a shrewd politician like Hon. J. D. Reid foresaw the good effect it would have on the Ontario elections. It should also be an important factor in securing the return of Sir Henry Drayton to parliament. If the Liberals oppose the bill, as many believe they will, the purchase of the Grand Trunk may become a commanding issue in Dominion politics and perhaps give the government the best opportunity in the world for an appeal to the electorate. The talk is that the Liberals will compel the government to put the measure thru the house under the closure rule. They hope, no doubt, to bring to their assistance the powerful Canadian Pacific Railway Company and other interested parties, a number of whom would scarcely less powerful which fear public ownership and shrink from the advancing tide of railway nationalization. There will be opposition to the bill when it gets to the senate, and it will not all come from Liberal senators. There is no disguising the fact that the bill will be fought in the upper house by some of their seats in that house to Sir Robert Borden.

If a hard fight is put up against the Ontario members to stay closely at Ottawa, also, a number of them would like to spend the coming week on the stump. The railway legislation will undoubtedly have the right-of-way, and the temperance bills may not be proceeded with for the present. It is common talk that they may be sidetracked until after the 20th. A good many people are also of the opinion that the special committee of the house on the subject of civil re-establishment will delay bringing their report until after the provincial election.

The government is hopeful of making a fair showing in the Dominion by-elections. Should they go right and should the Conservatives make a big win in Ontario, it is altogether probable that some of the senior members of the cabinet may retire and new blood be brought into the line can occur. Nothing much along this line has happened, however, until the return of Sir Robert Borden, the prime minister, to the capital in about his usual good health. Another effort may then be made to really get the Unionist party into shape as a permanent organization.

The caucus held a week ago for that purpose made rather a poor impression. The proposed platform was not disclosed to the public and the government was laid upon the illness of the prime minister. Sir George Foster's speech, of which so much has been said and written, was a moving effort and fitted in well enough with the present universal tendency to weep. But it was a trifle hard on the Robert to have attention drawn to his appearance, his thinness, his pallor and his nervous condition. Sir George, however, if all accounts be true, was quite carried away by his own eloquence. He described what a fine, big, strong, healthy man Sir Robert used to be, and how over-long upon the change that had come over him. One man is quoted as saying that Sir George seemed to be delivering an old-time temperance lecture and unconsciously was posing the prime minister in much the same way as he was wont to pose a "virtuous example" in days gone by.

On Monday, and again on Thursday, the house discussed the arrangements made by the government for financing and handling the wheat crop of 1919. Judge D. D. McKenzie went off at a tangent when he arraigned the government for prohibiting the export of our wheat to the United States. However, he managed to start a debate on the reciprocity question, which so befuddled the issue that the house fairly lost itself in the labyrinth of wheat. It was a clean-cut statement by Hon. T. A. Cregar which finally caused the bill to pass without opposition.

Mr. Cregar came again to the rescue of the government in the oleomargarine debate. He supported the government bill upon the ground that the Canadian farmer should make good enough butter to face competition at home as it faced competition in every other country of the world. He assured the Ontario farmers that oleomargarine would not destroy their industry. No country in the world in proportion to its size exported so much butter as Denmark, and yet Denmark permitted the manufacture and importation of oleomargarine.

The spectacle of a government supporter moving the six months' hold for a government bill was presented last Thursday when Frank Glass of Middlesex spoke in opposition to the bill per-

GOITRE CURED

BY THE ABSORBENT METHOD

Dr. W. J. Hughson's Goitre Cure cures by absorption. The safe and reliable way of curing goitre, so that it will never return. It does away with all danger and uncertainty of the knife in an attempt to cure goitre. It also removes the hazard of internal treatments that so frequently play havoc with the heart, stomach, kidneys and nerves. Just a simple home treatment applied externally that removes all traces of goitre or thick neck, and leaves no scar or other disfigurement to indicate that you ever had goitre. In order to prove the reliability of this claim we herewith produce one of the many testimonials we continue to receive.

CAUTION:—The marvellous success attained by Dr. W. J. Hughson's Goitre Cure in the treatment of goitre has induced many imitators to advertise cures (so-called). There is no other remedy that is just as good or nearly as good as Dr. W. J. Hughson's Goitre Cure. The remedy with a Record. For testimonials with name and address attached to each, and for Free Booklet containing particulars of the treatment, write S. W. HUGHSON, Dept. W., 52 Major St., Toronto, Ont.

To whom it may concern:—Having been a great sufferer for several years from that nerve-wrecking malady, goitre, I believe it to be my bounden duty to spread the glad tidings of this wonderful cure to those afflicted with this distressing disease of all that wonderful remedy, Dr. W. J. Hughson's Goitre Cure, has done for me. After spending over $100.00 on doctors and an endless variety of treatments that were recommended to me my condition grew gradually worse until I became almost a shadow of my former self. My nerves were so affected that I frequently took violent shaking spells so that I could not control my arms and limbs. My husband, who is a powerful man, could only by the greatest difficulty hold me in his arms. With this condition I became a burden. One day my grocer, seeing me in one of those spells, and being informed that the large goitre I had was the cause of my trouble, he advised me by all means to try a bottle of Dr. W. J. Hughson's Goitre Cure, without delay, as he had heard it frequently spoken of as a safe and reliable cure for goitre. I acted on his advice, with the result that after several months' faithful treatment my goitre has entirely disappeared. My nerves and heart action restored to normal condition again, and I am steady and strong, besides, I have gained considerably in weight. So great is the change in my health and spirits that I am a new woman today, and thank you, Dr. W. J. Hughson's Goitre Cure.

That it may be the means of convincing others of the efficiency of Dr. W. J. Hughson's Goitre Cure to cure goitre, I gladly give this testimonial.

I am, yours truly,
MRS. ALBERT WRIGHT,

mitting the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine. Speeches in bitter opposition to the bill had already been made by Dr. Edwards of Frontenac and Donald Sutherland of South Oxford. It was evident that their intention to divide the house, and bring like a revolt against the government was anticipated. When the testing time came, however, they were not strong enough to demand the yeas and nays.

Dr. Clark of Red Deer was back to form and contributed a rather epigrammatic speech to the debate. He quite naturally spoke as a free trader, but he also argued that it was better for people to use oleomargarine than to eat their bread unbuttered. He admitted there was a falling-off in the dairy production of Alberta, but attributed it to the natural tendency of the farmer to go in for beef instead of milk. The dairyman's life, according to the doctor, was not a happy one, and he is reported by "Herald" as saying:

We have a large country of very great resources; we have the greatest possible facilities for young people, if they have the go in them, to get into bigger lines of business, and dairying, especially the milking, is a very irksome game. I know, because I have done more or less of it for eighteen years, and it is not a pleasant experience, with the thermometer at 90 degrees in the shade, to have a cow take milk, and wipe it thru both your eyes.

Dr. McElroy of Muskoka also came to the rescue of the government. Representing as he does an agricultural district, and having rendered distinguished service at the front, his speech undoubtedly had a marked effect. Mr. George Boyce, who represents Carleton County, one of the biggest dairying centres of Canada, also supported the government.

On Wednesday the house sat just forty minutes, which was probably thirty-nine minutes longer than was required for all the business transacted. On Friday came the announcement about the Grand Trunk, which, as we have already said, dwarfed every other happening of the week.

Ten years ago there was only one outspoken advocate of railway nationalization in the Canadian parliament, and for years he plowed a lonely furrow. It was hard to tell whether he got more knocks from the Conservatives or from the Liberals. But today the public men of the country are falling over themselves to support public ownership, and few openly remain in the seats of the scornful.

"MICKEY" WILL REMAIN AT THE OAKWOOD

"They are coming from all along the Hamilton highway, from all around Toronto as well as from all parts of the city and I believe we have had many people who had seen the picture before."

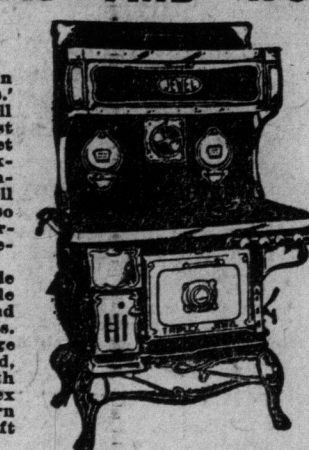

"We are going to remain 'Mickey' for three days more, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and it looks as we will cater to as many people as we have on any three days of the past week."

Thousands who requested the showing of "Mickey" again will be glad to know of Mr. Crang's decision for never before in the motion picture history of Toronto has such a sensation been caused by any one production. "Mickey" played sixteen weeks at the Grand Opera House and on the last week there was no falling off in attendance or enthusiasm.
