RECENT WEDDINGS

Walker-Morrow.

Cedar Camp, Kings Co., June 6—The residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Morrow was the scene of a very pretty and interesting event this evening, when Florence Susan, their daughter, became the bride of Thomas Lawson, son of the late William and Mrs. Walker, of St. John. The happy event ended with a sumptuous repast. Mr. and Mrs. Walker reside in St. John on the termination of their honeymoon.

Thorne-Devine.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized yesterday afternoon by Rev. F. P. Dennison, when William Harold Thorne was united in marriage to Myrtle Devine, daughter of Peter Devine, of this city. The wedding took place at the home of the bride in Waterloo street, and the house was nicely decorated for the occasion.

Sullivan-Thorne.

A very pretty wedding took place last evening at 7 o'clock at the parsonage of the officiating clergyman, 165 Leinster street, when Rev. D. J. MacPherson united in marriage Arthur K. Sullivan and Annetta Thorne. The bride wore a traveling suit of navy blue, with hat to match. The groom is a motorman on the St. John street railway. The happy pair will reside at 275 Britain street.

FEUDISTS DEFY THE GOVERNMENT

Sink Mutual Differences For Common End

Opposed to Conscription

Willing to Kill Their Neighbors,
But Object to Being Forced to Slaughter Entire Strangers

It is reported that the famous Hatfield-McCoy feudists of Kentucky have banded together to resist conscription, and will shoot the first government official who goes near them. They have constructed a fort, it seems, and are looking forward to a little private war of their own. At first sight it appears remarkable that these Kentuckians, who are fighting men if ever there were fighting men, should adopt pacifism for a principle, and that the men whose hands have been reddened with blood of neighbors should show any dislike for killing Germans. Furthermore, these Kentuckians are pure Americans. There is nothing hyphenated about them. There are no Germans among them. Almost invariably they are of Scotch, Irish lineage, men of the Boone type whose forefathers resisted the authority of King George III, and set up a government of their own before Lexington.

Against All Government

There are just two explanations. One is that while the Kentucky mountaineers have no objection to killing a man whom they dislike, they have a very strong objection to doing anything, even killing enemies, at the order of the government. They hate all governments, which they consider their natural foes, and probably fear that if they obey the American government in the matter of registering and being drafted into the army, they will have to continue to obey it, and that their liberties will thus be restricted. The other fact to be borne in mind is that the Kentucky mountaineers are the most isolated and primitive of Americans. They live in little communities cut off from the world, and almost impassable roads from each other. They hear little news of the outside world. Many of them are illiterate. They have little feeling of kinship with the people who live fifty miles away, for the average mountaineer never travels more than twenty miles from his home from the day he is born to the day he dies.

A Primitive People

Living as they do, intermarriages have for generations been the rule rather than the exception, and the primitive habits and passions of the original Kentucky mountaineers have thus been accentuated and the mental and moral outlook is about what it was a hundred years ago. This also explains to some extent the ramifications of a feud. Families are related in the most complicated manner. Thus it was that the feudists had a fashion of involving nearly everybody in a feud. The feudists of Kentucky are related in some way, distant or near, to one of the feudists. Many were related to both, and family feeling and family pride are prominent Kentucky characteristics. It was almost impossible for a feud to die out because one family or another was exterminated. Finally, an education in a feud is not the best training for a soldier. The feudists do not ordinarily fight in the open. They lie in wait for their victim and shoot him in the back if possible.

The Hatfield-McCoy Feud

The Hatfield-McCoy feud was one of the most noted in the history of the state. It began in 1860, when Randolph McCoy alleged that Floyd Hatfield, brother to "Devil Anse," as the head of the Hatfields was called, had stolen two of his razorback hogs. This cause of offence was explained in a moderate way of blood, and peace was restored. The war broke out more violently than ever when Jone Hatfield ran away with Rosanna McCoy, though he already had a wife. The woman eventually went back home but Jone followed her, and they continued to meet in secret. Then old Randolph McCoy captured Jone and handed him over to the revenue officers. Jone was rescued by his friends, and again a peace was patched up. The fire burst forth again when Talbot McCoy accused Elias Hatfield of owing him $1.75 and when he did pay it, gave him a terrible beating. Ellison Hatfield then got into the fight, and when he was trying to brain McCoy with a cleaver was shot in the back by another McCoy.

Other Deadly Feuds

Talbot, Farmer and Randolph McCoy were then arrested by the Hatfields, taken out into the woods, tied to trees and shot to death. From then until a few years ago the feud raged, and was one continuous history of murder and the brutal beatings of both men and women. The Hargis-Bockel feud was another famous private war and has its origin in a political fight. The Tolliver-Martin feud began in 1884, and though it lasted only three years it claimed twenty lives, while two-scoremen were wounded. It is proper to remember that the gun-fighters of Kentucky constitute a very small part of the state's population, and that even among the mountaineers the outlaws are in a minority. It is hardly possible that they can put up any resistance that the government will not be able speedily to crush out.

THANKFUL MOTHERS

Mothers who have once used Baby's Own Tablets for their little ones are always strong in their praise of this medicine. Among them is Mrs. Marcelle Boudreau, Mizonette, N. B., who writes: "Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine I know of for little ones. I am very thankful for what they have done for my children." The Tablets regulate the bowels and stomach, cure colds and simple fevers; in fact, they cure all the minor ills of little ones. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.
