WORLD W

Vancouver, July 31.—After fifteen minutes, the jury in the Green vs. the World, this brought in a verdict for the with costs.

The principal feature of the the scathing language in which the Clement scored Caron in his charge to the jury. "It is very difficult for me to find language to properly the action of Mr. Adolphe Caron all it seems to me that a man life, when a transaction is going an office, who writes to the that office a letter of that should have the insignia of which has been conferred stripped from him. I have not est hesitation in making that and making it as strongly as bly can.

That letter reached Green, ed the court, "and I say Green should have resented the dish him in making him such a p. Nor have I the slightest hes saying so. Either Green is most innocent of men, unl that a proposition of that sort honorable, or else he must have that in the long run possibly ent would accrue to him from are only two hypotheses and the worst construction upon of Green in respect to that p. then I say he has only himself if your verdict should be ag.

"I trust that the day has when any man in British makes any difference between vate and his public life."

D. G. MacDonnell, counsel World also scored Caron, al him as "a sly and wily old was in politics before many o born and is still at the ga claimed that Caron had with meshed Green in his toils and the latter would have had the destroy the letters at issue, Ca too much to trust to any such Donnell closed with a plea to remember that liberty should the public press in behalf of interests of good government.

Green himself was the star the day. He acknowledged ha up the letter in question and copy of the answer. He tho this was the only portion of the pondence with Caron not on the letter had evidently been wr his wire to Caron that the 2 censures would issue. He had Mackay as the recipient of th but never had a conversation concerning their value or di Questioned as to whether th were the cause of his resigna answered that he resigned b personal reasons. It might be that he would re-enter politie as to his position with referen government, he said he wished get around his obligation an he knew.

D. W. Higgins, editor of the stated that he had secured a corning the letters and had a famous article. He submitted per and Cowan and both refus to affirm or deny the facts. Then he was sure he was on track and published the expos

The article in the World, wh Green, ex-commissioner of lands claimed to be libellous, read a "In 1906 a company called the tinental Exploration Syndicate to R. F. Green, then chief cor of lands and works, for leasea tions of coal lands on Pine Ry when the early construction of Trunk Pacific railway through tion of British Columbia is ara certain to become of great diate value. Representing the was sir Adolphe Caron, formerl vative minister of the crown. The application was refused by who alleged, as his reason, th minion government had not the 3,500,000 acres of land in the corner of the province which veyed to it by the terms of the act under which the Esquamiit a mo railway was built. Later arrangement was arrived at Green, representing the B.C. and sir Adolphe Caron, acting for continental syndicate and the granted.

"Caron had previously wrt e name a friend who could be hold shares in the syndicate (Green's) interest. Green colling Caron for his beneficence as N. McKay, then premier McBri secretary as a safe person in vest the ownership of the sha wrote Green stating that the va shares which were to be given free gift and were rated at $1 was $50,000. Green replied than for the very great kindness. were then issued by the chief of er of lands and works to the tinental Exploration Syndicate, secured leases for coal lands river in the same section of the for which Green was given and in the name of Neil McKay.

"Later on there was a hit Green thought he had not reced ticiently large share of the objection was raised by one leagues. Be that as it may, re conservative lawyers, then re who still reside in the city ver, were retained by Caron b claims. Armed with the cor between Green and Caron, viewed the executive council. At ing all the members except 3 were present. The lawyers we in pressing sir Adolphe Caron's Green put up a show of res was dumfounded when cont sir Adolphe Caron's letter and h ter thanking sir Adolph for his ness and instructing him to shares in Neil McKay's name. The difficulty must have bee over for it was stated in the government organ printed in on the 10th October last, that continental Exploration Syndicate formed in London with a view to explore and develop coal t
