THE Minister of Finance has announce ed that a second Domestic Canadian war loan will be issued in September.

THE immigration into Canada for the past fiscal year was 48,537, the smallest since 1900. Three-fifths of the number came from the United States.

OFFICIAL report is that of the 2.150 soldiers who have returned to Canada wounded or unfit for service, only two per cent. or about forty of them express ed a wish to go on farms. This suggests that we must not look to the land to take care of any large proportions of the hundreds of thousands of our soldiers who will return to civil life.-Ottawa Journal

Now that the smoke of battle has cleared away, an analysis of the North Perth bye-election would indicate that the Liberal victory was a spontaneous expression of resentment on the part of the electors against the extravagance and incompetence of the present Ontario Government and the impotence and graft of the Government at Ottawa, During the short campaign of two weeks, rural North Perth was never busier, the farmers endeavoring to utilize the good hay-making weather, following an exceptionally wet season and nothing that was said or done by either party influenced the voters to any great extent. The meetings that were held were poorly attended, and it is questionable whether much of the material printed by the party papers, pertaining to the bye-election, was read by the farmers during the campaign, owing to the above conditions. The Government endeavored in every way possible to distract attention from the extravagance and incompetence of their administration, and tried to make Bi-lingualism and Prohibition the issues. They raised a big cry, because the Liberals saw fit to contest the riding, and used loyalty as a bogey in such a way that it appeared as a big stick over the heads of the electors to compel them the heads of the electors to compel them to vote Tory or be branded as disloyal and pro-German. Mr. Hay appealed to elect him and thus strengthen the hands of the Opposition, which would tend to a still greater check being kept upon the extravagance of the present Government. Undoubtedly the successful result of the North Perth election for the Liberal cause is largely due to the candidate's personal popularity. On the other hand, the tide of public opinion against Toryism, supplemented by the illogical claims of the Conservative campaign managers, is known to tive campaign managers, is known to have contributed in a marked degree t the defeat of the Government candidate

LONDON, July 17.—Fighting with dashes here and there of the picturesque, resulted in further extensive gains Saturday for General Haig's troops in Picardy.

The village of Longueval, which Friday night marked the apex of the British salient, has been left behind, while north of Bazentin le Grand British troops broke through the German third line of defence and took British are fighting in the outskirts of Pozieres, junction point, of two military roads and main obstacle to an advance on the Heights of Martinpuich, which commands the surrounding battleground.

In the Bazentin le Petit sector, extending their gains of the previous day, the British have won control of the entire forest, which takes its name from the village. Here a Bavarian high officer with the whole of his staff fell prisoners.

The advance of the British is marked by fighting unlike anything before seen in western Europe during this war. The romance of other days is being renewed. For instance, against a position strongly held by is being renewed. For instance, against a position strongly held by the Germans armed with portable machine guns, there was a cavalry charge by the famous Dragoon Guards. Not since the German legions first swept down through Belgium had the western front seen horsemen advancing to the charge. The trench warfare put an end to that. The charge won. The Guards dashing over a terrain pocked with shell holes, swept through the German ranks and, turning swept back. man ranks and, turning swept back The Germans fled from the position they were organizing. man ranks and, turning swept back. The Germans fled from the position they were organizing. The British losses were small.

And, while this picture brought to staring infantrymen a vision of other days, scores of duels were being fought above earth by British and German aviators. Low hanging clouds handicapped the fliers, and the battles were fought within easy sight of the foot soldiers beneath. General Haig Sunday night announced that seven German machines had been shot down in the last day. The War Office has given out a statement by the commanding general which shows that the British in the two weeks of fighting have advanced four miles from the German first line. Two successive systems of powerfully organized positions, including field works, redoubts, trench labyrinths, dugonts, underground mazes and supported by a number of fortified villages, have been carried. Sir Douglas Haig says in his report: "All continues to go well on the British front, and at one point we forced the enemy back to his third system of defence, more than four miles to the rear of his original front will several the system of defence, more than four miles to the rear of his original front.

A night attack against the French resulted in the recapture of Blaches and La Maisonette. The War Office at Paris Sunday night claimed that both villages had been won back. The Teuton attack in this region was delivered in a fog, the French defenders of the town being taken by surprise, Before the Germans could organize themselves in the two hamlets, however, General Foch sent forward strong reserves, whose counter-attacks forced the Germans to retire.

while the German main headquar-While the German main headquarters officially tells of spirited fighting on the British front, General Haig Sunday night disposed of the engagements as 'of no importance.' That the British are preparing for another surge is indicated, however, by the announcement that the big guns are steadily bombarding the German lines. The howitzers, which have enabled the British to batter their way through two systems of defence, have been brought up across the captured terrain, and are now battering at the third line.

That the Germans in their retreat from their second line left behind great quantities of war stores, including some powerful guns, was made known Sunday night in the regular report from headquarters in France.

Five heavy howitzers and four 77-millimetre guns were captured by the British.

COUNTER-BLOW AT VERDUN.

General Nivelle Makes Progress

Against Besiegers.

LONDON, July 17.—General Nivelle, defender of Verdun, Sunday launched a strong counter-offensive against the Germans on both banks of the Meuse. Throughout the day the French have made progress, especially in the region of Fleury, one of the key positions on the north-eastern front, according to the midnight report from Paris.

The French attacks, which began Saturday evening, realized gains not only south and west of Fleury, but south-west of Thiaumont, on the eastern bank of the river, and east of Hill 304, on the western bank. In addition a movement by the Germans which sought to penetrate the wooded section between the Meuse and Pepper Hill was broken up.

The Berlin statement received Sunday afternoon admits a French success near Thiaumont.
