

INTRODUCTION
(Con.)

so peace, to be successful, must also be organized in a definite co-operative manner. If we lose the peace, through lack of foresight and unpreparedness now, then we shall have only ourselves to blame for the unnecessary suffering which will inevitably follow.

War is fundamentally a process of nature to promote human evolution. When the elements attack us, we find ways and means of protection, which in many instances are the foundation of the means of turning the warring elements to our service. We must first learn to protect ourselves by controlling these things and then to turn the power and energy which would go into war and other abuses into channels where they shall be used and not abused.

War will continue to be the method by which we must evolve until a substitute is found to take its place. Mankind cannot hope to progress in the art of peace and security until he realizes that a world-wide co-operative organization is the essence of success in the process of evolution towards world peace.

I have already pointed out that "Peace lasts longer than War" and the benefits to be derived from peace-time co-operation would be far greater than any that may be won in war-time.

" PEACE ON EARTH, GOODWILL TO ALL MEN "

Is not this what all mankind, through their different religious beliefs and hopes, are really aiming at? The aim is right, the methods are wrong. "Goodwill to all Men" means "Co-operation and Collaboration" and the prize is