

"An amazing story of incredible gallantry and fantastic daring, gay with humour and poignant with pathos."—JAMES DOUGLAS in The Star.

The Irish at the Front

By MICHAEL MacDONAGH.

With an Introduction by JOHN REDMOND, M.P.

SECOND EDITION. Cloth. 1/3 net.

"'THE IRISH AT THE FRONT' is an epic, wherein are related great stories that will be recalled as long as the war is remembered. . . . Ireland may well be proud of her sons: they have given her a new glory."—Evening Standard.

"In a vivid popular style Mr. MacDonagh puts flesh and blood on the dry bones of the official dispatches."—Times.

"A book which every lover of great deeds must read. It contains a thrilling record of heroism fighting tremendous odds."—Daily News.

"Page after page uncovers the story of a heroism such as few of us had dreamt of."—Irish Times.

"A vivid human narrative of the war, at once a fine contribution to the history of the great deeds of our day and a tribute to the heroism and sacrifices of the Irish."—Freeman's Journal (Dublin).

"A fine book. . . . The chapters are real pages from the book of life pulsating with ideals as well as incidents, and full of unconscious pathos."—Globe.

"A record of heroism unmatched in the annals of any other country's warriors—and scarcely paralleled even in the long history of our own people's deeds on fields of battle. . . . Every page palpitates with human interest."—Irish News.
