

IN CONCLUSION

This Act offers as full a measure of Prohibition as has been sought by temperance advocates in any province at any time.

Experience will make clear just where and how it may be strengthened up.

In 1900 it was satisfactory to temperance advocates. After fifteen years it stands to-day as the only reasonably full measure of Prohibition which in any province has stood the test of final litigation. It offers to the people the opportunity of testing in practice a measure which in war time will be, admittedly, of the highest value in conserving our national energies and resources, and which at all times (if successful in operation as it should be) will be of paramount permanent worth in promoting sobriety, domestic happiness and prosperity amongst those of our people who most need help in those directions.

THE LAST WORD ON CONSERVATION

"The necessity for conserving our national resources has been occupying the attention of our legislators, national and state. Laws have been enacted to protect our forests and our water supply. Millions of dollars have been spent in controlling contagious diseases among our domestic animals, and to eliminate the boll weevil from the Southern cotton fields and the various blights from our fruit orchards. What greater national resource has our country than our boys and girls, and why should not the government protect them from the blight caused by the use of intoxicating liquors?"—Congressman Addison T. Smith, of Idaho.
