FINE SERVICES AT PARK ST

Hon. Justice McLaren, of the Court of Appeal,
Makes Three Splendid Addresses

Missionary Works Only Dealt With—Dr Thornton Also Delivered Splendid Speech.

Missionary anniversary services were conducted in Park St. Church yesterday by Hon. Justice McLaren, of the Court of Appeal, Toronto. It is probably the first time in the history of the city that so eminent a member of the judiciary has spoken from any of our pulpits, and the large congregations present were very much pleased and profited by the discourses. Justice McLaren has not only been for many years a local preacher of the Methodist church, but for the past 20 years has been elected successively at every general conference as a member of the General Board of Missions. He has also been a member of the executive committee and has given much time and labor to the interests of the society. He is consequently thoroughly informed both on the general missionary question and the particular work of the Methodist Missionary Society, and Park St. Church and pastor are to be congratulated on securing his services for their anniversary day.

In the morning Justice McLaren based his remarks on Matt. 28, 20, "I will be with you always even unto the end of the world." He first showed the vital connection between this familiar promise and the condition upon which it depends, viz:—Obedience to the command, go ye into all the world and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost.

The discourse was a masterly and convincing argument from the history of Christianity from the first century to the 20th, proving the essential connection between the promise and the condition. The great epochs in the history of the Christian centuries were reviewed, and it was clearly shown that whenever the church fulfilled the condition the promise had been made good and Christianity at home had rapidly advanced, and that whenever the church had failed to seek to evangelize those beyond her pale she had declined at home. Speaking of the great evangelistic movement in England in the 18th century, known as the Wesleyan revival, he stated that in 160 years of its existence Methodism had grown to 30 millions which was more than the total number of Christians in the world at the end of the 8th century.

In the afternoon Justice McLaren briefly addressed the Sunday School, to the interest of both teachers and scholars. He informed them that it was probable that an important new work would shortly be begun in Japan in providing orphanages for the care of children whose fathers had lost their lives in the present war, and that a forward movement of the Sunday Schools for missionaries could effectively assist in this work.

The evening service took the form of a platform meeting in charge of the pastor, and addresses were given by A. W. Thornton and Justice McLaren. The first speaker emphasized the importance of the many small donations as furnishing the larger amount of the total contributions. This was illustrated by the fact, stated by the pastor in the morning, that the juvenile offerings alone amounted to $23,000. Dr. Thornton spoke very briefly, but with his usual ability and eloquence. He explained that after the masterly address of the morning he did not feel justified in taking more time.

Justice McLaren followed with a popular address on things he had learned as a lay member of the Mission Board. The incidental allusions to his own obligations to the society for the Gospel in his youth in the remote parts of the lower province explained his life-long sympathy and active co-operation in its interest.

The music of the day was of a high order. In the morning the choir rendered "Leaving the Saviour," and Jasper Wilson sang "Your Mission" in an excellent manner. At night the anthems were, "I will be with you," "I will be with you," "I will be with you," and "Evening." Miss Hill and Mr. Wilson also sang a duet, "O, Divine Redeemer."

Next Sunday night the pastor will start a series of sermons on "The Home Circle," the first being "Courtship and Marriage."

MURDER AT FORT WILLIAM.

One Held Greek Workman While Companion Stabbed Him.

Winnipeg, March 6.—Nicholas Potthakos, a Greek workman, employed on the coal docks, was brutally murdered Saturday night on Christie Street, Fort William.

Potthakos was going home with his son, aged 18, and when in the rear of a Finnish boarding house, was grabbed by two men. One held Potthakos while the second plunged a knife deep into his breast. The murderer escaped, and Potthakos stumbled a few yards, then fell dead.

The boy gave the alarm, and yesterday morning identified a Finnish man named Jacob Candova as the man who stabbed his father. The suspected man is 21 years of age and denies all knowledge of the crime. The Greek colony is greatly excited over the tragedy.

SPOKE PEACE MESSAGE

How President Roosevelt Utilized
His Inauguration.

The United States Must Show by Deeds as Well as Words an Attitude of Friendship to the Weak and to the Strong Nations of the Earth Alike—Brilliant Spectacles—The Inauguration Ball a Notable Success.

Washington, March 6.—Theodore Roosevelt of New York and Charles Warren Fairbanks of Indiana were on Saturday inaugurated respectively President and Vice-President of the United States.

A few months ago they were elected with the greatest popular acclaim ever accorded candidates by the electorate of this Republic. Saturday the verdict of the American people, rendered on Nov. 8, was confirmed in the presence of such a throng as the national capital rarely has witnessed, and with a setting of brilliant pageantry. The inauguration of President Roosevelt was made a vast ceremony in Washington. The city is a symphony in color. The decorations throughout the city are more elaborate and beautiful than on the occasion of any previous Presidential inauguration. Twice as many flags have been used this year as ever were before, and the splendor of the scheme adopted for the city's adornment never has been surpassed.

At the Reviewing Stands.

The President's reviewing stand was directly in front of the White House. It was handsomely constructed and beautifully decorated with flags and laurel. That part of the stand occupied by President Roosevelt and his immediate party extended out over the sidewalk. The seats in the stand were occupied by the families and personal friends of the President and Vice-President, members of the Cabinet, the Diplomatic Corps, members of the Senate and House of Representatives, the Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the United States Supreme Court, Gov. Fairbanks, the chairman of the Republican National Committee, members of the Inaugural Committee, and the press.

Opposite the President's stand was one for the general public, seating more than 6,000 people. Seats also were erected along each side of the Court of the Capitol, the seats rising fully 30 feet above the level of the procession. In front of the State, War, Navy and the Treasury Buildings, the latter being for the accommodation of the department employees. Through this great amphitheatre the inaugural parade moved to the music of a hundred bands.

Wire ropes were stretched on both sides of the avenue, the entire length of the route of the parade, and the side streets leading into it were crowded with humanity early in the day. The crowd overflowed into the terraced stands and balconies, filled every window and fringed the cornices of almost every building with eager faces.

Women Faint.

Hundreds of women fainted in the press, and ambulances and emergency hospital corps were kept busy answering calls. Whenever one turned he ran into an obstruction in the shape of a compact mass of people. Washington, so far as the itinerary of the procession was concerned, was clogged. Its flow of pedestrians absolutely choked and obstructed by the masses of people.

With all the crush, however, it was a good-natured throng. It laughed when its toes were trod on, and cheered when it was kicked in the shins. Fights were few, and the police had an easy time of it so far as suppressing any outbreaks of anger or displeasure was concerned. The business found their only labor in keeping the crowds back of the ropes.

At the Capitol.

The President and his escort started from the White House promptly at 10 o'clock and at 10:45 the President entered the Capitol, where the 58th Congress was in the throes of dissolution and bills were awaiting his approval.

In the Senate, shortly before noon, the Diplomatic Corps, the Supreme Court and the members of the House of Representatives were announced. Then Vice-President-elect, Fairbanks, was announced. After him, President Roosevelt, the President-elect, was announced, after which the oath of office was administered to Vice-President Fairbanks by Senator Frye of Maine.

President Roosevelt then took the oath of office to the Senators-elect, and with a tap of his gavel the 58th Congress came to a close.

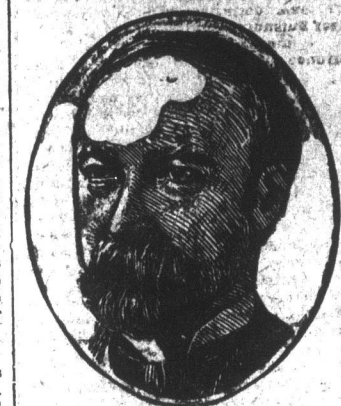

Meantime the people left the galleries and went in procession to the east front of the Capitol, where the inauguration of President Roosevelt took place. When he appeared on the stand a mighty cheer burst from the great concourse. The cheering ceased as Chief Justice Fuller, his silver hair falling over his silk and ermine robe, stepped upon the dais holding in his hand a Bible. Mr. Roosevelt stood opposite him, and solemnly repeated the oath after the Chief Justice and then stooped and kissed the book, after which he delivered his inaugural address.

What the President said. President Roosevelt, in the course of his inaugural address, said: "Much has been given to us and much will rightfully be expected from us. We have duties to others and duties to ourselves—and we can shirk neither. We have become a great nation, forced by the fact of its greatness into relations with the other nations of the earth, and we must behave as becoms a people with such responsibilities. Toward all other nations, large and small, our attitude must be one of cordial and sincere friendship. We must show not only in our words, but in our deeds, that we are earnestly desirous of securing their good-will by acting toward them in a spirit of just and generous recognition of all their rights.

But justice and generosity in a nation, as in an individual, count most when shown not by the weak but by the strong. We must ever be careful to refrain from wronging others, we must be no less insistent that we are not wronged ourselves.

"We wish peace, but we wish the peace of justice, the peace of righteousness."

VICE-PRESIDENT FAIRBANKS.

ness. We wish it because we think it is right and not because we are afraid. "No weak nation that acts rightly and justly should ever have cause to fear us, and no strong power should ever be able to single us out as a subject for insolent aggression."

Bows His Acknowledgments.

In a little while President Roosevelt was again on the avenue, returning to the White House. His carriage was surrounded by Rough Riders and his way was cleared by Squadron A. The President stood in the carriage much of the time, bowing right and left in acknowledgment of the gracious enthusiasm which his appearance aroused. He returned to the White House, and after a light luncheon, reviewed, surrounded by his family, his personal friends, his Cabinet and hundreds of distinguished visitors, the magnificent parade formed in his honor.

The inaugural ball, the largest, participated in by 20,000 paraders, came to an end when preparations for the closing function, the inaugural ball, were actively begun.

The parade had ended but a short time when the movement upon the Pension Building began. The vanguard of the guests, of whom at least 12,000 were finally assembled, began arriving in every variety of vehicle and from every direction. The streets about the great building in which the ball was held were transformed into a babel of equippages, hurrying footmen, anxious attaches and gorgeously gowned women.

The day which was drawing to a close had been one of uninterrupted pleasure. The ceremonies were carried out with perfect precision and ease. The parade was the greatest spectacle Washington has seen since the grand review in 1865. It remained only for the inaugural ball to end a day of unbroken propitiousness, and the ball, which continued till midnight, was the most successful one ever held in the land.

Wore Lincoln's Ring.

On his right hand, during the inaugural ceremonies, President Roosevelt wore a plain gold ring with an opal setting. It is old and worn, but promises to remain priceless for centuries. It was the ring President Lincoln wore on the night he was shot, and was loaned the President by Secretary of State John Hay.

BANQUET TO MR. BORDEN.

Conservative Leader Carefully Avoids Any Controversial Subject in Montreal—Jokes on Sam Hughes.

Montreal, March 6.—R. L. Borden was banqueted at Club Lafontaine on Saturday evening under the presidency of Hon. L. O. Taillon, some 250 of the leading French Conservatives of the city and district being present. People supposed that the Conservative leader would refer to the school question, but Mr. Borden ignored the matter, and had it not been for Hon. A. R. Angers, no one would have ever supposed that there was a crisis on at the seat of Government over the matter. Mr. Borden's address ignored political questions generally, but he called upon the party generally to get together and organize, even if they supposed that the next contest was five years remote.

In referring to E. F. Clarke's death, Mr. Borden said that it would be a loss to the House of Commons, a loss to Ontario and a loss to the whole country.

One of the exceedingly amusing features of the demonstration was the handing around of the following fake telegrams:

"Hon. L. O. Taillon, Chairman Borden banquet: Hear Sam Hughes is with you. Kill him—Bruchet!"

Col. Hughes took the joke in spirit. He part and got an ovation as he told how his grandmother was French and his daughters spoke the language well.

Rodolphe Forget, M. P. for Charlevoix, made his debut as a speaker.

Hon. A. R. Angers made his first speech since he retired from public life. He urged upon Mr. Borden the fact that the French-Canadians had rights in other provinces as well as here in the Province of Quebec.

Sir William Hingston, Mr. Bergeron, M. P. for Estrie, M. P. for Amos, M. P., and Mr. Marchand also spoke.

E. F. CLARKE'S FUNERAL.

Many Floral Offerings and Condolences From Public Men.

Toronto, March 6.—The widespread feeling of sorrow at the death of the late E. F. Clarke, and the esteem in which his memory is held, was fully attested by the long line of citizens which, during Saturday and all Sunday filed past the plain black casket containing the remains.

Owing to the insufficient seating capacity of the Reformed Episcopal Church, the public service will be held in Broadway Tabernacle at College Street and Spadina Avenue at 3 p. m. "THE WAYWARD SON."

"The Wayward Son" is the attraction billed for the Grand on Wednesday next for matinee and night. This production is playing Hamilton to-night and London on Tuesday night. The Buffalo Courier of Mar. 2nd says: "The Wayward Son, a melodrama of absorbing interest, rapid free action, startling situations, sensational climaxes, clean cut dialogue, sparkling humor and tear drawing pathos, is playing the Lyceum this week."

The stirring new comedy drama, "The Wayward Son," which is to be the attraction at the Grand on Wednesday for matinee and night, is said to be a beautiful story of everyday life; beautiful, because of its simplicity, because of its wholesome truth and the lesson it brings home to every heart. It is refreshing in this day of imported problem and suggestive plays, to be enabled to witness an American play of plain common folks. A play in which the prattle of an innocent child, the tears of a devoted old mother, the strong love of a trusting girl, the fidelity of an old time negro, the villainy of a police official are all cleverly intermingled by the deft hand of the author in a tale embodying comedy, tragedy and pathos. Manager Springer has given the piece a sumptuous and realistic stage setting and engaged the services of a splendid company, headed by the well-known actor, Neil Trueman, who is the author as well as the principal interpreter of the piece.
