A Farmers' Enterprise

Attention is directed in this issue to the announcement of the Farmers' Co-operative Harvesting Machinery Co. This is said to be the greatest organization of farmers ever got together in any industrial enterprise, and should meet with the support of agriculturists generally. The new 1907 Coker binder, now being offered to the farmers of Canada, has been under test for several years, and has shown itself to be a machine that the farmer can bank on doing good work under the most trying circumstances. A large quantity is now being built for this season's market. The announcement of the firm on page 224 and 227 of this issue gives the particulars regarding the harvesting machinery this firm has for sale.
