FRENCH OFFICIAL. Paris, May 1.—2.07 p.m.—The French are reorganizing the positions captured in the Champagne and no heavy fighting occurred last night. Following is to-day's official account of military operations: "South of the Oise we repulsed a German attack on one of our small posts in the region of Barisis. Along the Chemin des Dames the artillery fighting was rather violent. In the sector between Troyon and Hurbise patrol encounters occurred. A German reconnoitering party which attempted to approach our lines east of Hurbise was driven back by our fire. "In the Champagne the night passed in relative quiet in the sector of our attack, where our troops are organizing the captured positions. The number of prisoners captured by us in the fighting yesterday and actually enumerated is more than 400. "There is nothing to report from the remainder of the front."

RUSSIAN OFFICIAL. Petrograd, May 1, via London.—On the Caucasian front, from the west of Baneh near Armirda, a large party of Kurds made a heavy attack on our guards. Says to-day's official announcement: "The situation was postured by our cavalry. Attacks by Kurds and local inhabitants on organizations in the rear of our army are becoming more frequent. "On the Russo-Galician and Roumanian fronts there were the usual reconnoitering operations and rifle firing.

OIL PRODUCTION. Amsterdam, via London, May 1.—Private advices received in Holland by persons largely interested in Roumanian oil fields, assert that oil production in Roumania is being resumed at the rate of about 40 carloads a day as compared to 120 carloads in 1914. The operating companies, which are run by Austro-German capital, enjoy preferential treatment. It is reported here that a big underwriters association is forming in Hamburg. It will run on lines similar to those of Lloyds in London. The members will deposit 100,000 marks and will be liable to the extent of their entire fortunes.

CONCESSIONS WON. London, May 1.—As a result of recent strikes among the German workers in the war industries considerable concessions in foodstuffs have been granted, according to a despatch to The Daily News from Amsterdam. The ration has been raised by a half pound weekly, while the potato ration has been increased to five pounds.

The Shriners in Cranbrook and its surrounding districts are forming a club.

ONE OF BRITAIN'S BEST

Continued from page two Mr. Balfour has special reason for remembering the Venezuelan affair. The first awkward question with which the Unionist Government of 1895—with Lord Salisbury as Premier, Mr. Balfour as leader of the Commons, and Mr. Chamberlain as Colonial Secretary—fresh from their huge triumph at the polls in July of that year, had to deal.

They had inherited this question in its accentuated form from their Liberal predecessors, for it was in April, 1895 (two months before the long-standing dispute between Venezuela and British Guiana was brought to a crisis by the arrest of the Venezuelan authorities of two inspectors of the British Guiana post-office on the ground that these inspectors had been encroaching on Venezuelan territory. President Cleveland took up the cause of Venezuela, and in December, 1895, sent a message to Congress, practically stating that any attempt on the part of Great Britain to enforce her claims on Venezuela, as regards the long-standing dispute between Venezuela and British Guiana without resort to arbitration would be regarded as a cause of war by the United States. After a lot of belittling talk with the common-sense of the two countries prevailed, and the matter was amicably settled. Throughout, the Government in which Mr. Balfour was a conspicuous figure exhibited a conspicuous moderation and self-restraint in its attitude, although Mr. Olney, the then American Secretary of State, in his correspondence with Mr. Balfour, gave an extreme interpretation of the Monroe doctrine which went considerably beyond previous statements on the subject.

Mr. Balfour has, indeed, no cause to love the word "Venezuela." For in 1903, the first year of his Premiership, he was forced, very unwillingly, by the wrongs inflicted by President Castro on British subjects, to institute a blockade of Venezuelan ports. Castro endeavored to embroil Great Britain and the United States by the United States, but Mr. Balfour's Government handled the situation tactfully and successfully, and though there was a little recalcitrance in the United States, the attempt to embroil the two countries in a serious dispute happily failed.

It would not be doing Mr. Balfour any injustice to say that his attitude toward the word "Venezuela" is a measure of his attitude toward the word "Spain." It was in April 1904, in the second year of his Premiership, that the successful Anglo-French agreement, which evoked a vigorous expression of roused-will betwixt Great Britain and France, and laid the foundations of the still closer alliance of to-day, was concluded. And the signature of the offensive and defensive alliance with Japan, in August 1905, was one of the achievements of the last few months of his Government. Few public men in Great Britain have had a sincerer appreciation of the peculiar difficulties which this war has presented both to the Government and to the people of the United States. None feels toward them both more kindly and more sympathetically than he. And no man could more worthily represent Great Britain at her best in that great country than can the ex-Premier who has long since resigned party leadership, but whose distinction and renown are at once the common property and common pride of all his fellow-countrymen.

Garden Foes. Unfortunately the backyard vegetable grower has some difficulties to overcome. It will not be all pleasure and profit which he must look forward to because there are innumerable insects and fungus diseases which cause much worry and trouble and necessitate the use of extraordinary methods to prevent or control. Most of these troubles may be overcome by spraying the plants with remedies which can be secured from seed stores and other firms handling these insects.

The following is a list of the more common vegetables and the insects and plant diseases attacking them with remedies or preventives. ASPHALTUS. Small, blue, black or yellowish, about one-half inch long, which appear early in May and feed on the young shoots. Keep the bed closely cut in the spring or allow mowers to cut through it after cutting season is over, spray with arsenate of lead. Encourage the lady bird beetle which destroys many of these insects.

Anthracnose or Pod Spots. Brown or reddish spots on the foliage and roots. Found on low damp ground. Plant only seeds which have no signs of the disease. Pull up and burn diseased plants as they appear. CABBAGE, CAULIFLOWER, AND BRUSSELS SPROUTS. Root Maggot. A small whitish colored maggot one-quarter of an inch long. Lays something like a grain of wheat, found just below the surface of the ground either close to or on the roots. They eat the roots, causing the plants to droop over. Apply a solution of corrosive sublimate one-half ounce dissolved in five gallons of water, at the rate of half a teaspoonful over each plant once a week for five weeks after they are set out, commencing three or four days after planting.

White Worms and White Grubs. Greyish white grubs which work at the surface of the soil cutting off the plants. They may be trapped by spreading a mixture of poison bran over the surface of the soil close to the plants. A pall of bran with sufficient paris green to highly color it, should be moistened with molasses until it is sticky and then spread by hand. This moisture should be kept on the ground during the early part of the season. A small greenish worm appears quite early in the season. Dust with pyrethrum or heliothrips powder when the plants are in the bud. Spray each week with a mixture of three table-spoonful of flour when young. A piece of burlap may be used for this purpose and the plants may be punched in the bottom.

Aphis, also called louse. Small greyish insects which multiply rapidly. They appear at any time in the season. Spray forcibly with a solution made from steeping one pound of tobacco refuse in one gallon of water. This solution may be used on all plants on which Aphis are found.

CELERY. Blight. Black spots appear on the foliage followed by wilting of the plant and a soft rot on the stalk. Spray each week with a mixture of Bordeaux mixture covering the entire plant. CUCUMBER. Striped Beetle. Black and yellow striped beetle which feeds ravenously on the tender leaves of the plant in the very early stage of growth. Dust leaves when wet with ashes or air-slaked lime. Squash Bug. Dark brown beetle which sucks the juice from the plant. Hand pick and destroy. Found on the leaves.

MELON. Cucumber insects usually fly attacks and may be destroyed as given above. ONION. Onion Maggot. A white maggot similar to the cabbage root maggot. No effective means of control. Spread charcoal over the ground or try the corrosive sublimate solution as recommended above.

SPINACH. A violet color, patches appearing on the leaf of the onion. Some advise spraying with Bordeaux mixture from the time the onion plant is three inches high. POTATO. Colorado Beetle or Potato Bug. Duet with paris green when the dew is still on the plant, or place a teaspoonful in a watering can of water and pour over the plant. If it possible have the plant dusted with paris green before the bug appears.

Scab. Easily recognized by characteristic roughness of the skin. Immerse the uncut tuber just before planting in a solution of two fluid ounces of formalin with two gallons of water. Dry, cut, and plant. Blight. Brown spots distributed over the leafy surface, usually found in July. If they are not prevented from growing, the whole plant will be destroyed. Spray once a week for four or five weeks with Bordeaux mixture from July 1st.

RADISH. Root Maggot. Use the same remedies as given for cabbage and onion maggot. TOMATO. Tomato Worm or Horn Blower. A large worm which rapidly defoliates the plant. Hand pick and destroy.

Blight. Black spots appearing on the leaves which spread rapidly and cause the whole plant to die. Keep the plants growing vigorously.

BRING YOUR WASHING

Thursday, Friday and Saturday and We Will do it For You in the "1900" Way by One of Our Four Types of

"1900" Electric and Water Power Washers and Wringers

We want every woman in Brantford to see what "1900" service really is. Don't stay away from this, the biggest demonstration of Washing Machines ever held in Brantford, because you feel you don't want to buy. We will not coax or bother you in any way other than explain and demonstrate what comfort and convenience the women of Brantford are missing.

Solve the Help Problem—Get them a "1900" Electric and watch their appreciation.

Your Wash Woman didn't show up this week. Get a "1900" Electric and she will be there and finish your washing and ironing in less than the day.

The home with a "1900" Electric has no fear of the washerwoman not coming; she will be right on the job and away again before lunch.

One lady user of the "1900" Electric has used her machine 5 1-2 years and tells us she can depend upon it every Monday morning, as there is never anything wrong with it.

Another satisfied user has a "1900" hand Washer 11 years. Seven years ago it was converted into an Electric. Last year it was replaced by a New Model "1900" Electric, less the motor, which was taken from the old machine and placed on the new. Were they satisfied? Why didn't they try some other make? Because the "1900" filled perfectly every requirement.

You don't pay for a "1900" Electric Washer for itself. Why wear yourself out. Come in and see for yourself. We will not ask you to buy; you are the judge; we are satisfied to abide by your verdict.

Mr. Man of the House, if you had to do the weekly washing, do you know how many Electric Washers there would be in Brantford? There are 6,000 homes and it's a safe bet 5,000 of them would be electrified. What conveniences have you in your labors, while the housekeepers are drudging with the wash tub and the wringer? Say, have you ever turned the wringer for your wife? Try it.

GERMANS RELY ON HINDENBURG

Increasing Evidence of Manner in Which Leader's Name is Regarded

By Courier Leased Wire. British Headquarters in France, April 30.—via London.—(From a staff correspondent of the Associated Press.)—There are increasing evidence daily of how the German high command is using the name of Field Marshal von Hindenburg in an effort to sustain the morale of the German fighting men, which was lowered by the retreat from the Somme and successful launching of the British and French offensive actions. Prisoners recently taken also tell how von Hindenburg continues to be held up to the German population as a whole as the man in whom it must repose confidence and hope for final victory.

The recent retreat was explained by the desire of the German command to take up a position in the famous Hindenburg line and prisoners now say that when it becomes known in Germany that the British have turned this position and taken possession of several miles of it southeast of Arras, great depression will be caused. Civilians as well as soldiers placed great faith in this line on which they say millions upon millions of marks have been spent. They had been told the line was so invulnerable that the Germans could sit in it for the remainder of the war. The German class of 1919, it is learned, is being called up, but is still in training.

SPORT

THIS FROM EVENS. Arthur Fletcher tells a funny story in the boat to be seen this morning on the opening game of the season.

Boston, Helmie Zimmerman dressed a few remarks to Tim Quigley appertaining to a decision rendered by the referee. The gladiators were in the field at the end of the inning, and the teams were changing places. Fletcher passed close to them, and the famous "Trolie" was cranking something. Quigley, to wit, Quig didn't seem to be paying attention. "What's the trouble, John?" asked Fletcher. "Why?" he replied indignantly. "Zimmerman's got to cut out and get on the umpires. That stuff goes around here, and I will report him. I will report him." Fletcher was in a daze for the remainder of the afternoon.

TRIPLE PLAY. The first triple play in the first was made yesterday at Toledo by St. Louis, but it was the first of the season. At Toledo Saturday in the game with Milwaukee, two former Redbirds, New York Yankees, pulled off a trick. With two on bases, the ball hit Hartzell, who pegged Boone at second, the latter touched the sack and also the runner who had been on first.

WELSH-KILBANE. New York, May 1.—Unusual interest is being shown by followers of boxing in the fight between Fred Welsh and Johnny Kilbane, holder of the featherweight title. The fight will meet for a bout of rounds.

Under the state rules no official decision can be rendered by the referee, who will be Charles White, veteran arbiter of many noted championship matches. The winner is likely to be decided by the action of spectators based upon the show made during the contest.

Each man is considered one of the cleverest of the game, and each artist in his respective class. Kilbane is credited with being the best hitter, but there is little, if any, betting on a knockout. The fight will enter the ring at about 135 pounds, which will give a lightweight champion an advantage of five or six pounds in weight of his opponent.

CASEY'S CLAIMANTS (By Homer Crox) Just why the chicken crossed the road, and the exact tenure of year of one Mary Ann seem to be as yet a matter of some dispute. The riddle that has sprung up: "Who wrote 'Casey at the Bat?'"

A present day poet has not climbed very high on the ladder of success, less honor of the authorship of the most famous bit of baseball verse has been flung on his shoulder. Everybody from Felicia Hemans, Boomerang Bolivar the Cowboy Poet of the Rockies, has got in on it, fashionably.

Whoever Tubby Murphy, Miller and Jigger Johnson get together on a corner lot to revel three-old-cat to the Polo Grounds, Manhattan, they are sure to have a strikeout are known. Election the world around have filled with evenings with it and The Have Literary critics from the Atlantic Monthly to the long-legged boy who gets the magazines for the Post Appeal have tried to unriddle the authorship of "Casey at the Bat."

Historically, the poem became famous through two high names. One evening, a score of years ago, when De Wolf Hopper, the well-known actor, was "making up" some lines slipped through the stage entrance rattled at Hopper's dressing room, and thrust in to the actor a crumpled bit of paper. "Say, man," said the man in a hurry, "won't you read that for me tonight?" The man was the late Archibald Claverly, author of "The Man, Mr. Barnes of New York." Hopper ran over the poem a few times, and when it came time for an encore, he best into it, with the result that the house stormed. Hopper himself fell in love with it, and recited it ten years up and down the land.

The larger the fame seems to be swinging around to Ernest L. Thayer of Worcester, Mass., having led by a horde of clutching aspirants including John Quinlan Murphy, St. Louis, George W. D.V.S., Valentine, Thompson et al. That is a comfortable woolen merchandise who literary endeavors are more a by-product, writing only when glorious frenzy lays hold upon him instead of being pent-to a cork as so many of our modern fillers are. He was Ivy Orator, Harvard class of 1885, and was prominent in literary and journalistic activities.
