REPAIRING THE SEWER. - Roadmaster McKay and his men are engaged in taking up a section of the old sewer on Northumberland street and laying down a thick hemlock one in its place. They are now working near George street. The old sewer in some places was found to be entirely rotted away, owing to its contact with the roots of elm trees along the streets.

HARD TIMES .- As an instance of the mancial tightness in the United States, a gentleman of this city told a HERALD reporter that a prominent business man in Bangor, Me., whose credit has always been unimpeached, lately offered a bank in that city his note for $8,000 for discount with $10,000 of United States government bonds as collateral, but the bank refused to accept them. The real reason was that the bank had not the money to spare.

THE GRAMMAR SCHOOL .- H. Dumaresq of Halifax, architect of the new grammar school building on York street, was in the city Wednesday last, and in company with John Hodge, the inspector of the building, made a thorough inspection of the work done by contractor Limerick, and expressed himself thoroughly satisfied with it. A CURIOUS MOULD .- James Patchell, of St. Marys is in possession of a curious old mould which was picked up in the vicinity of Friel's Creek. AN OLD TREE GONE .- During Monday night's storm an old tree standing at the entrance to the back yard of the officers' barracks, was blown down by the wind and lodged against the upper end of the fence surrounding the square. Tuesday morning a detachment of soldiers was ordered out and cut the tree down. Its top and branches were very large and covered with a heavy mass of foliage, so that it took some time to have the whole debris cleared away. It is said that this old tree was planted by major general Hunter, who administered the government of the province as commander of the forces and president of her majesty's council from 1808 to 1811. The tree is thus 82 years old at the least.

A FALSE ALARM .- The alarm of fire sounded Monday night in the midst of that wild storm gave people a most unearthly start. Some plumbers working on the roof of the Charlotte street school had left their charcoal pots alight upon the top of the building, and the fierce wind fanned the coals into flames. Hundreds of people gathered near the building in spite of the wind and Hawthorne and I er, trustee Weddall harmlessly after all; but the carelessness of the plumbers in leaving the burning pots there is none the less censurable, for had there been a high wind without any rain great damage might have followed, and the city lost one of its handsomest public build-

The Sons of England had a grand celebration at Stanley on Tuesday. A large deputation from Islington lodge of this city, went to Stanley Monday. On their arrival there, they were met by some of their brethren in Stanley and at once escorted to the lodge room, where a session of the lodge was held, and fourteen new members initiated. After the adjournment of the lodge the Islington members, by invitation of Stanley lodge, attended a dinner in the agricultural hall. The dinner was a grand affair. The table was arranged to accomodate one hundred and fifty persons, and every seat was occupied. The menu was elaborate, and served in the most artistic style. Music was furnished by the Fredericton brass band, and there were toasts and speeches until a very late hour. Tuesday morning a church parade was held, headed by the band. Rev. The Wild West Show. Pawnee Bill's historic wild west show was in the city Wednesday and showed in Pine Park. A great number of country people were attracted to town, as is always the case when a circus is at hand, and many curious sights were seen. One of the mos amusing was a row which occurred between a newly married pair on the corner of Queen and Carleton streets. The young man had evidently been drinking; his wife, who was influenced by an entirely different class of spirits, approached him with a threat and some loud talk ensued and the young woman delivered a well directed punch from her fist in her husband's face. The rain, and chief engineer Lipsett, captains blow along with the liquor he had imbibed somewhat dazed him, and in the twinkling and secretary Sampson mounted to the of an eye the young woman had plunged roof and secured the charcoal pots. It was her hand into his pocket and extracted considerable of a hoax and turned out therefrom a goodly roll of bills, which she took charge of and transferred to her own pocket. She very sensibly had an eye after the money. After administering a few more punches in the face of her inebriated spouse, the latter decided he had better eave the scene. The young woman had the sympathy and applause of all the spectators, and it is highly improbable that her husband spent any more of that roll of bills.

MILLVILLE LAND SUIT.

Verdict for Mr. Purvis in the Equity

The equity case of Thomas W. Purvis vs Peter Johnston, highway commissioner for the parish of Southampton, which has been exciting considerable interest in Millville Fredericton, Southampton, Bright and other parts of the county, is just about ended and has resulted in a verdict in favor gress for more than a year. Somewhere in the early part of 1892, Mr. Purvis bought a A Lawlor, E A O'Brien, S H Berry and T accordingly he commenced building. When the store was about half built, Peter Johnston ssioner of highways, found that the side of the building was in the ditch of the rice from the bride's aunts in Boston; ice said Woodstock road, as it was then ream sett from Mr and Mrs John Ander-bounded. He accordingly laid information son; Lizzie Anderson, toilet sett; coffee pot | before Benjamin R. Burtt, a justice of the card receiver, Mr and Mrs Crawley; silver highways, and had him convicted under fruit spoon, Dr and Mrs Currie; china tea the highway act of 1886. Mr. Purvis took ston requested Purvis to remove the buildwhich the latter refused to do. He contended that his building was entirely within the boundaries of his deed, by which boundaries the piece of land had been conveyed through two or two or three parties' hands, and that it was not he but the road comissioners who were encroaching. He claimed that the highway road had in course of time swerved outside of the limits established in the original survey, and had ncroached upon his land. Johnston on the other hand contended that even if this were so, the fact that public money had been spent upon the road as it then lay made it a highway beyond all question, and that Purvis must remove his building whether or no. But Purvis stoutemove. Finally Johnston summoned about twenty-five special constables under the highway act, and on the 28th of May, 1892, appeared before the building intending to nove it by force. Purvis warned them off, and came to Fredericton, where or making affidavits of the facts, he obtained from Sir John C. Allen an injunction restraining Johnston and the constables from interfering with the building until the rights of the parties were ascertained. From that time to the present week there have been equity bills and answers, interrogatories, cross-bills, pleas, demurrers, excep tions without number passing between the parties; and all the time Purvis was busy inishing the store, buying his stock and starting into business, of which he is now doing a good stroke. After a good many djournments the final hearing on the case was commenced before Judge Fraser in the supreme court chamber on Saturday last. There was a jury of seven composed of J J Weddall, M. Tennant, Jacob Hazelton, A Calder, I R Golding, J D McKay and B

J. A. Vanwart, Q. C., and William Wilson appeared for Mr. Purvis, and Messrs. Black, ordon and Bliss for Peter Johnson, comnissioner. The taking of evidence occupied the whole of Saturday and Monday. On Tuesday the jury and the lawyer's in terested went to Millville in charge of the sheriff to take a view of the premises in dispute, and returned Tuesday evening at eight o'clock. The argument of counsel was commenced Tuesday night at eight o'clock and finished Wednesday morning when the judge addressed the jury and sent them out. They brought in a verdict for Stanley for a few days, when they will come Mr. Purvis, standing six for and one against to Fredericton to reside. They will live him. Mr. Jordan for the defendant accepted their verdict. The court did not deliver judgment. The questions left to the jury by the judge were: Does Purvis' building Wm. H. Anderson, of this city, received a stand within the limits of the highway?
