

Dinner to Lord Morris. PREMIER ENTERTAINED BY FRIENDS.

The rate of taxation to-day is a heavy burden on the fishermen of the country and they are the principal producers of the main breadwinners in the community. This was one of the many important reasons made by Lord Morris in the course of an eloquent speech decorated with a profusion of beau-

Well-known Glove Manufacturer Tells of His Remarkable Experience With Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

MR. HERBERT STREET is only by using this restorative treatment that I have been able to attend to my large and growing business, and for this reason I feel that the least I can do is to recommend the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to others who suffer from nervous derangements.

"In fact, it has afforded me a great deal of pleasure to recommend the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to my friends, and to observe the way in which they have been benefited by its use. As a result of the large number of cases I have observed, as well as my own remarkable experience, I feel that I can speak with some authority."

PRaise for Lord Morris.

Sir Edgar warmly praised the services rendered by Lord Morris to his native land. He would never have been honoured as he was by the British Government if he had been thought unworthy. Lord Morris's warm love for his native land was emphasized, and the hope expressed that Newfoundland would see to it that his pride in her should be justified by placing him in the position of being justly proud of his country. In his efforts on our behalf it was up to us to back him. His career had not reached its zenith. Long years of usefulness and successful endeavour he felt sure lay ahead for the distinguished guest.

LORD MORRIS REPLIES.

Replying, Lord Morris said in part: I hope you all believe that I fully appreciate and assess the value of the compliment paid to me to-night in this public function tendered spontaneously by so many representatives of my fellow citizens. If it gives you one hundredth part of the pleasure and satisfaction it has given me, then indeed you must have had a very pleasant evening. You would one and all require to stand in my place to-night to understand and estimate just what my feelings are and how full I am of gratitude to you all for such a testimony of regard and confidence. I value to-night's demonstration not alone for its representative character, but for the spirit of good fellowship underlying the function. And what can I say? What words can I use to convey to you my thanks? Sincere and heartfelt thanks are all that I can offer you. A great English poet has said that "a grateful heart by owing owes not, but still stands at once indebted and discharged." And so it will be with me. Paradoxical as it may seem, I shall always be in your debt although by my gratitude and thanks I have paid the debt to-night.

MEMORY A SOLACE.

I have been away from you now for nearly five years. The accidents of life ordained that in another land I should have to begin over again my toil and labour. Since leaving you I have had to work incessantly to build up a business all of which had been practically abandoned and lost by my long connection with public life in this country. All the difficulties and obstacles met with during those five years—the loneliness of great cities—the intelligent professional competition—the grind amongst strangers—are all forgotten to-night in the good fellowship which you have shown me. I feel like a boy coming home for the holidays. The memory of this evening will be to me a solace in worry and trials and an incentive to strive harder for your continued approval. And yet this evening's pleasure is not altogether without a suggestion of regret, that in the years that have passed, in the many opportunities I have had, I did not strive harder to deserve your esteem. If I could only have realized to-night's function, could have seen the faces of those who sit around this banquet hall, how much harder would I not have striven and worked.

COMPLIMENTS CHAIRMAN.

And you, Mr. Chairman, presiding at the head of this function to-night—to you I think I owe special thanks. In coming here you bring a weight and have lent a strength by your character and standing in the community, which few could do. During the five years I have lived in England you have ever been a good loyal friend and I learned that not alone is blood thicker than water, but that Newfoundlanders abroad, no matter how they may differ at home, love and cherish that kinship and friendship, born through birth in the same country. I have had opportunities of daily studying the manner in which you performed the duties of your high office in London, the heart of the Empire. I have in many cases since residing there invoked for Newfoundlanders and others the services of you and your worthy Secretary and staff and have ever met a ready and willing response. I recall the many occasions when you and I have met at great feasts and banquets, Royal and civic functions; how proud I felt of the manner in which you lifted Newfoundland's interests on to the plane where other great portions of the Empire had already been raised by their representatives. I hope there is nothing in the disquieting rumour that you are about to vacate your high office as I know of no one who can bring to the duties of that position that ripe experience in a complete knowledge of the industrial, commercial, financial and economic conditions of Newfoundland. You possessed these qualifications in a high degree when you took office five years ago. You have since added to that equipment five years' daily dealings with Newfoundland's needs and requirements. But you possessed other qualifications than those I have mentioned. I well remember fifteen years ago when as Prime Minister I asked you to allow me to nominate you on the Dominion's Royal Commission to make a tour of the Empire with a view of studying the raw materials, industries and development of these great estates, how you readily assented, making only one condition—that there should be no pay attaching to the office and that you should be permitted to defray your own expenses. At home here we have many striking illustrations of your public spirited philanthropy and your record for war work stands alone. You are a fortunate man in possessing the gift of knowing that it is a good thing to be your own executor.

IN SERIOUS TIMES.

We live in serious times. Whilst we sit here the air is traversed through space with wireless messages from continent to continent with details of strife in industrial, social and civic undertakings. Many of the great troubles of the world to-day are the result of the war—its natural aftermath—but a great deal is due to lack of discipline and duty on the part of citizens. Institutions as old as civilization itself are in the melting pot and every one appears to be a law unto himself. We live in the present and think nothing of the future. "Let us eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die." The whole idea of service is lost, and the ruling principle seems to be "Win no matter how." As I have said world conditions are largely the result of the war. Newfoundland, like other countries, has its trials and difficulties. We are apt sometimes to magnify them, but at the same time it is well to know just where we stand. An ostentatious policy of burying our heads in the sand to avoid seeing what is coming is a poor policy for any country. It is always best to know the worst. A correct and early diagnosis of the patient may save his life. What we want most to-night is courage. Look not mournfully into the past, it comes anyway. Wisely improve the present; it is thine. Go forth to meet the shadowy future with a brave and stout heart. A realization of just where we stand would do a great deal of good. We want a united people and a united Legislature now more than ever. The war has increased our burdens of taxation, the interest on the public debt alone being probably increased by more than a million dollars annually. This burden itself cannot be reduced, but it may be that other services can, by a wise policy of economy and retrenchment, be operated cheaper without sacrificing efficiency. This can only be accomplished by a union of all parties, at least on these fiscal questions. On all other matters, party strife and party politics, we may agree to continue as in the past. If we could take a lesson from the good old days when Horatius held the bridge, when

"None were found for party
 And all were for the State."

We would be getting near the point of launching out on a great wise public policy. We must be patriotic. We must put country first. Everyone must realize that they have to contribute their quota of help in our present difficulties. The rate of taxation to-day is a severe burden on the fishermen of the country and they are the principal producers of the main breadwinners in the community. We probably have in this country to-day 60,000 families, 55,000 of which live out of the fisheries, directly or indirectly. We must not therefore muzzle the ox that treads out the corn. The duty of finding a way out of the difficulties rests with the public men of the country. I hope and believe they appreciate the responsibilities that now rest upon them. They can best accomplish the task of putting this country on an even keel by unity. No better monument could a public man erect to perpetuate his name than by bringing about the interests of the country, a unity of purpose. I know it is sometimes hard to forget party principles and personal ambitions, but in the end such a policy will bring its own reward.

OTHER SPEAKERS.

Mr. W. R. Howley ably proposed the toast of Newfoundland, which was replied to by Mr. C. E. Hunt in a delightfully humorous speech, which was not lacking in wisdom for all its banter.

Hon. John Anderson proposed and Hon. W. J. Ellis, an ex-mayor, replied to the toast of city. In a brief, but exceedingly interesting speech, well favoured with a fine wit, Mr. A. B. Morris, K.C., proposed the toast of "Trade and Commerce." He spoke of his long friendship with Lord Morris, although always opponents in public life. Only once had they been together, when the 1898 contract was the point of agreement. Sir Edward Morris had passed into the House of Lords, and he had passed out of the House of Assembly and he did not know which, under existing circumstances, was the greater honour.

Trade, when Lord Morris left here was at its apex, not due to him, maybe, but he was confident that had he remained with us, his sanity of judgment would have prevented much of the evil that had since resulted. What was wanted to-day was not to forget the principles underlying party government, but to remember them. Party government was the safe and sane form, leaving the decision of policies to the country, and the duty of carrying these into effect to those whom the country honoured with its confidence. Mr. W. A. Munn responded in a well-reasoned and informative address.

The toast of the Chairmen was proposed by Mr. W. J. Higgins, K.C., and replied to gracefully and feelingly, Sir Edgar read a message received from J. R. Bennett, Esq., who is on the West Coast, regretting his absence from town and extending cordial greetings to Lord Morris.
