for their slaves? We are also total abstinence. Is a great advance towards total abstinence. I Many Mohammedan rulers, even emperors, have been sots. The British consuls in London tell us it is almost impossible to do business with the Turks owing to their drunkenness. In Central Africa an expiorer stumbled on a distillery conducted by Mohammedans, and where the very priests keep grog shops. Whole population of given over to drunkenness and in the orgies that follow abandon all sense of decency. Then they are widely addicted to other stimulants such as opium, the use of which is not prohibited by the Koran. Canon Taylor draws an ideal picture of their missionaries going through the land making converts through the words of the prophet. The Moslem missionaries as they have been found by Stanley and others trouble themselves little about the Koran, but with the sword break in upon the unarmed population and carry off women and children for the purpose of slavery and to replenish the harems of Arabia and other countries. Most pitiable was Livingtone's account of the slave horrors perpetrated in Central Africa by these sensualists, and equally heartrending was Stanley's recital of the outrages he witnessed when he met whole caravans of women and children being carried off as slaves. Such was the outcome of a religion commanded to be propogated by the aword, to meet the onward Gage.

Such was the outcome of a religion commanded to be propogated by the aword, to meet the onward march of which, pure, peaceful Christianity had been planted. Should not our prayers go up night and day that God should cover their defenceless heads with the shadow of his wing? Should not young Canada with her vigorous activity and generous impulses send forth some of the twenty servants of the Master asked for by the laborers in that distant vineyard? In the Stanley expedition Canadians had shown their fitness to cope with the hardships of this eastern life." The speaker was applanded at the conclusion of his able address. Venerable Archdeacon Phair, of Rupert's Land, was introduced and proved a very entertaining speaker. His pictures of Indian life were graphic, while his many anecdotes of the originality of Indian converts were both amusing and instructive. He thought that the people here should do something practical, and not merely preach, organize, formulate and exhort. They wanted good all-round men in the Northwest who would first learn the language and then associate with the Indians as brothers. He had learned to love the naives, who had admirable traits of character, and when he left his wife and family or weeks they always took the best care of hem. The great work in the Northwest equired assistance, and he appealed to his searers to do their utmost in that great terribory.

The Bishop of Saskatshewan and Calgary furnished some interesting statistics of furnished some interesting statistics of Church of England mission work in the Northwest. It was felt that union of the church in Canada was desired, in the event of which the people of Eastern Canada would have greater conceptions of and enthusiasm in the work in the far west. # their work to them on the following Fridays. Mr. Reynolds thought the plan used by Mr. Gilbert, of Parkhill, a good one. It consisted in writing the answers to the questions on the board, the teacher drawing what he could from the pupils, and, if necessary, supplying deficiencies. Miss Goulding announced that she assigned pupils (say in history) a period, and allowed them to question each other, and also to make statements about events which they had learned. Pupil No. 1 makes a statement, No. 2 another statement, No. 3 and so on, until the pupil who could not make a statement was silent. Mr. Bryant was not present, and the teachers adjourned until the atternoon after the roll was called. The following
