RIVER RISING---WEST LONDONERS ARE ANTICIPATING ANOTHER FLOOD January 73 February 85

If present indications count for anything, the Thames River is about to First among Baking Powders, because of its absolute purity. Manutattained on Saturday last, West London will be in for another soaking at least the south portion of West London, which suffered so greatly during the recent flood.

With the rather warm rain of this morning, and the consequent filling up of all the creeks that serve as feeders to the river, both branches of the Thames have steadily risen since 5 o'clock, and at noon 5 feet 6 inches of water were going over the Springbank dam. Thus the river is exactly 5 feet lower than at the time it reached its
