Hasn't it yet dawned on the Tory mind of the Standard that the responsible ministers of this country will settle all questions of "constitutional propriety" and will brook no dictation or interference from the Governor-General? This ministry at no commanded a majority of the House of Representatives, and was dependent upon the goodwill of members of the regular protectionist and free half of free-traders and half of protectionists. Mr. Reid, the head of the free trade party, is Premier, and the tin this week, but it won't always be leader of the protectionists, Sir George Turner, holds the next important office, and is placated with the announcement that he ranks as equal with Mr. Reid. This double-headed arrangement was the practice in this country in pre-Confederation days, when a cabinet took its name from the French-Canadian and English-Canadian leaders of the party in power, such as the Baldwin-Lafontaine, McNab-Morin, Tache-Macdonald, and Brown-Dorion administra-

We have had coalitions in this country to carry out a special purpose upor which parties were agreed, such as Confederation, but probably it is only in Australia, that land of political surprises, where parties diametrically opposite in their programmes could coalesce for the purpose of holding office. They have agreed not to raise the tariff question before the next general election, when they will probably separate on the old lines. The unexpected union of the free-traders and protectionists leaves in the lurch the labor party, which now constitutes the Opposition, numbering about one-third of the House. The laborites do no care for the tariff question, and put labor matters before everything else.

He Knew His Eusiness.

The following story is being told of the adventures of a well known business man with a shrewd book agent, The victim was visited at his office by the book agent, who offered him a set of books describing, with alluring illustrations, "Beautiful Homes of America," The business man liked them,
"All right," he said, "I'll take a set. Leave them with me, and I'll take them out to my wife at Pleasantville tonight."

"Oh," said the agent, "I am going to Pleasantville myself this afternoon, and will leave them at your house if you wish.

The business man declined the offer, however, and the book agent departed with the sum in payment for the books Later in the afternoon the business man, arriving at his home with the "Beautiful Homes" under his arm, saw
