INSURANCE OFFERS BIG POSSIBILITIES

American Sales Manager Tells of "Inner Workings"-Gives Prospect Reasons.

An interesting talk on the possibilities offered by insurance for a life-career was given by S. H. Jones, sales manager of the Equitable Life Insurance Company, of Indianapolis, Indiana, and a former superintendent of education in the state, at a luncheon attended by ome half a hundred members of the Life Underwriters' Association, at the ecumseh House on Saturday.

Mr. Jones said he had forsaken the educational career because he realized that it led nowhere, that when a ma reached a certain age, he no longer could continue in it; and in looking round for a life work, he had deliberately chosen the field of insurance. In that field, he said, a man could continue to work until the end of his life, and he instanced the case of men in his own office, who had reached of passed the three-score-and-ten mark, who were still in harness.

He declared that the insurance business in recent years had taken on dignity it had not had previously, the reason being that business men and others had come to recognize it as a business proposition.

He gave some excellent advice to his hearers, among other things telling them that to succeed as insurance salesmen they always must have a definite reason to give when approaching a prospect with a view to selling him a policy. It was no use, he said, to simply say to a man, "I would like to write you some insurance." It was necessary to be specific. For instance, interest would be aroused immediately n a man who was approached by an agent with some such proposition as a suggestion that he ought to protect his latest mortgage by insurance, so that, in any event, it should not be lost to

Mr. Jones expressed the opinion that most important development in the insurance business of the last five years was the introduction of corporation insurance, by means of which a firm could protect itself against the eventuality of the death of the one man on whom the success of its enterprises depended, or could increase its credit or, in fact, make provision for any unforseen

Corporation insurance, he said, difered from personal insurance in several ways. It was governed by statute instead of by common law, the ques-tion of insurable interest had to be establiser instead of being taken for granted as it was in most cases of ordinary policies, and the question of as-signment was governed by much more

STOCKYARDS SITE UNDER OPTION IS THE LOGICAL ONE

Logical Place To Build Was Where Various Trunk Lines Met.

OPTION ON SITE THERE

Disaster To Place Yards On L. and P. S. R., Away From Other Railway Lines.

To the Editor of The Advertiser: The citzens have a right to know why the stockyards site now under option was selected by the committee, what they are to pay for it if the scheme is gone on with, and what the venture should yield them as an investment. Briefly, the matter stands thus: Upon opening the yards for business, the Government will install an inspector, who, if he is suspicious of any animal, will examine it thoroughly, and if convinced that it may not be fit for human consumption, must order it killed under Government inspection. The only place in London where there has been Government inspection of meat is at the plant of the Dominion Abbatoir Company, located at the crossing of the main line of the C. P. R. and the London-Stratford branch of the G. T. R., on the easterly limits of the city. Knowing this, the committee decided that it would be unwise to place the yards at a point which would necessitate the owner of an animal, so condemned, going to the trouble and expense of driving it or conveying it across the city. Shipments Shunted. To locate the yards on any one line of railway simply means that ship-ment coming in over other lines would have to be shunted around the city, delivery delayed, and the cost to the shipper enhanced unnecessarily. The logical thing to do was, therefore, to locate at a point where the trunk lines met and the site selected met the requirements as no other location in the city possibly co/ld. The only opposition to the whole scheme has been as to the location, and the committee feels that it is better to not handicap the venture with an out-of-the-way location that would simply drive shippers on to Toronto. We will leave this question with the citizens: Is it better to deliver cars from the London and Port Stanley line to yards located on the two big trunk lines or to force the shippers over the trunk lines, with their ramification of branch feeders, to interswitch with a single short line of railway? The citizens are aware that the L. and P. S. intend running a belt line around the southeasterly city limits to serve the factory district, and though they do not know the location of that belt line, it may be nted out that by running up any of the north and south streets in the east end, the G. T. R. can be tapped at any point and the stockyards reached with a minimum of cost and effort.

Odor Is "Fierce." The writer has been accused of trying to get everything for the east end. If the citizens are under any illusion as to the desirability of ocating near a cattle market, let them asked the residents of the stockyards district in Toronto what they think of the latter market. The smell is something fierce, and I understand that the Toronto folk are about to petition, or have petitioned, that the stockyards be removed to another location. The bellowing of the cattle at night is not conducive to quiet slumber, yet, knowing these things, I am willing to fight for the location of our own yards under my own nose and within my own hearing, because I take a business view of the matter. I am out to bring business to London, and the thing to do with an industry of this kind is to concentrate it at the point where it will have a chance to succeed, and where an allied industry is already omeone's toes have to be tramped upon, and mine are at the service of London and her workingmen. I state most emphatically that to lo-

We might better never build them. Another City Ready. I want, also, to tell the citizens of London that if we fail to grasp this opportunity of becoming the heart of the cattle business of Western Ontario, there is another city waiting to take the chance. I might also tell them that I could, in 24 hours, raise enough private capital to finance this venture twice over, but I am a believer in municipal ownership, and believe, too, that in owning the stockyards the city will have the whip hand in the matter Will explain this fully in another letter.

would spell disaster to the venture.

Meantime the site selected is on the G. T. R. and within 100 yards of the C. P. R., which stands ready to help us along in any way pos-sible or desirable. It is directly across the track from the abattoir, and the representative of the Salsberg people of Chicago, who was in over the abattoir plant, stated that we had an ideal location, and that if their company took over the abattoir they would erect an overhead runway across the G. T. R. tracks into their killing pens.

Close to Car Lines.
The yard will be close to the end of the Dundas street car lines-a prime consideration; has an outlet on First street; is uniformly level and is car floor high above the G. T. R. tracks-an advantage that is so obvious as to require no comment. The soil is ideal for the purpose, and the matter of water, light and drainage is easier solution there than at any other outlying point in the city. The price of the site is $1,500, and, immediately the plant is started, will be worth $3,000 or over outside of buildings or other improvements. I say $3,000 because land all around that section of the city is worth upwards of $1,000 per acre. As to revenue. On an initial business of ten cars per week (cattle), the city will realize a profit of from $800 to $1,000 per year after allowing for the follow-

$2,000 per year for a manager. $780 per year for other help. $100 per year for stationery. $150 per year for light. $150 per year for water. $770 per year for interest and sinking fund at 6 per cent on 20vear debentures. $60 per year for long distance telephoning and telegrams. $48 per year for telephone rentals. $100 per year for incidentals. Inspection Costs Nothing.

Government inspection will cost us nothing. It is unwise at this juncture to go into the matter of revenue, but any citizen interested can have details if he will call up any of the members of the committee. This, I may say in this connection, however: We have been asked to reserve an office at the yards for one of the leading banks. have been asked to provide an of-fice for one of the leading live stock commission houses of Canada, and these people will pay us a good rental, while other concerns of the same kind will undoubtedly want accommodation. The big difficulty the committee have been up against is that the people do not grasp the tremendous possibilities of the venture. We been compelled to fight against inside influences to gain a point that we could not, for business reasons, make plain to the people. We now lay case before them, and will abide by their decision. At the next council meeting the committee will ask that a date be set for the people to vote on this question. will take money to get the decision -an expenditure that has been forced on the people by our own city representative in the Legislature-but we must take the vote or lose the best possible site for a stockyard in or around the city. This expenditure will be more than made up to the citizens, we firmly believe, in the saving they will realize in the price of meat in the first three months.

This letter, as well as the others I have written on the subject, has been sent to all the city papers. Yours for a bigger and busier GEO. H. HANEY.
