The gisot sleeves had sprung wrists and hung low over the light brown gloves. The hat was a simple toque of brown velvet, with two quills and an ornament similar to that on her waist.

Now, these two costumes were studies. They fitted the wearers in every sense of the word, and they fitted the occasion. When these gowns grow a trifle passee, which certainly will not be before next year, they will be rearranged for home wear and look like new gowns. French-women really do not have half as many dresses in a year as Americans, taking their social conditions as equal, and they look so much better because they take such exquisite care of their clothes, an invitation to an and because they have a dress for each old fashioned sup- special need, and they never wear a grande toilette except when such is absolutely necessary. The Frenchwoman buys her gowns of material likely to be not only durable, but also of a style likely to remain at least partially in fashion for three or four years. It is only the demimonde that is extravagant. The ladies of the real world of Paris are tasteful, well dressed and suitably gowned, but in so sensible a manner as to win the admiration of the world. I began by longing for the indigestible biscuits and honeypots of my own country for breakfast, dinner or supper; then I think of our breakfasts and dinners here, and I hate them individually and collectively, from the thin, watery soup to the skimpy little quarter of a tough apple, and the bread that is nothing but a hard crust around a lot of holes that a rat could run through, and the coffee that is so richly black with chicory. But I must say that the pretty breakfast dresses worn and the dainty way the meal is served are something in its favor. I abominate the dinner, with its same unsatisfying soup and its long drawn out service of little dabs of this and that, but I must admire the hand-

A TOWBOAT'S MISHAP.

Word was brought to the city yesterday morning that the tug boat Agnes, of Van-conver, was ashore on the rooks to the east side of Clover Point. From what could be side of Clover Point. From what could be seen, the unfortunate tug was well upon the rocks with a rock through her bottom. A few men were working about the vessel when the Premier passed and her condition seemed almost a helpless one. Some assistance was, it is understood, secured from the city yesterday, but this was without avail. The Agnes is something of a stranger to Victoria. She is a small vessel but her loss would mean that of several thousand dollars. It is not known yet to what extent she is insured.

A cablegram from Hakodate was received by Mr. Richard Hall yesterday stating that the sealing schooner Geneva had reached that port. She will, in addition to her own catch, take on board the catches of other sealers and start for home in a few days. The schooner W. A. Earle is also in port at Hakodate.

The Changes in the Staff Made by the Trustees Last Night.

Miss Cameron Principal of South Park and Mr. McNeill of North Ward School.

The School Board at its meeting last vening made the changes in the teaching staff rendered necessary by the completion of the two new schools. There were no new teachers appointed, the different positions being filled by teachers already employed in the schools. Trustee J. Stuart Yates took part in the deliberations of the board, his doubts as to his eligibility to sit as a trustee for the city being set at rest by the opinion of the Attorney General as to the interpretation of the School Act read at the meeting on Friday night.

An almost entire reconstruction of the teaching staff was made with the following

The best remedy for this complaint is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. "Last Spring, I was taken down with La Grippe. At times I was completely pros-trated, and so difficult was my breathing that my breast seemed as if confined in an iron case. I tina my oreast seemen as it confined in an iron cage. I procured a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and no sooner had I began taking it than relief followed. I could not believe that the effect would be so rapid and the cure so complete.
