"For the last two years of his life, he read daily two chapters of M. Henry's Commentary. As he proceeded he felt increasing interest and pleasure; admiring the copiousness, variety and pious ingenuity of the thoughts, the simplicity, strength, and pregnancy of the expressions. He earnestly recommended this Commentary to his daughters; and on hearing the eldest reading for successful mornings, to the second, he expressed the highest delight." Dr. Gregory's Life of Robert Hall.—No praise can be greater, nor from a higher source, than this.
