There was a time—in fact there always was a time of some sort—when a candle with a double wick was looked upon as a luxury. Then we shook hands with ourselves, wrestled with the snuffers, enjoyed smutting our fingers every now and then, and of course appreciated the odor of the burnt cotton. Now-a-days we burn a lamp: but if we want a lamp that IS a lamp, one that will give a light that will lighten the darkness but not our pockets, we get the Pittsburgh Lamp; there is no other like it.
