FOR OUR 20YS AND GIRLS.

My dear boys and girls-Well, the gay holiday months are over, and for most of us September means back to work with school-book and slate. Many peo ple take a sort of gruesome pleasure in saying all sorts of mean things about September, the month of the golden-rod, luscious grapes, golden pears, and the time when the leaves turn scarlet and vivid under the caress of autumn's cool hand. Then, these same people make, or rather try to make us all unhappy by calling the first Monday "Blue Monday, because it is the day when most schools re-open. Bine Monday! Why, I think it is the brightest Monday in all the year—a real "red-letter day." It brings us back the companionship of our dear school friends and teachers, whom we have not seen all through the holidays, it stirs up our ambition to be "up and doing," and it is like a fresh start in life. So all hail to dear old September! the month of great industry for birds, squirrels, insects and little children.

The birds are making ready for their flight south, for with the worderful instinct which God has implanted in each stuffy head, they know that frost will soon overtake them. So they desert their nests and off they fly, over the trackless ocean, cross the mountain heights to climates suited to their needs and habits, where they will remain during the cold winter.

"Good-by's, good bye, dear birdles!
We would not have you here
While the skies are black and gloomy
And the woods are bare and drear;
But when the summer comes again,
And the trees put on their leaves,
We'll welcome you with gladsome hearts
To your nests beneath the caves."

The squirrels are busy at work storing away acorns for winter use, and the insects are beginning to burrow down into the soft, dark earth in search of a warm spot for their long sleep.

And my boys and girls? They will be busy, too, busy and cherry; working hard at school, enjoying the short, bright afternoons, and like the little birds saying:

"Merrily! merrily, pass the time cheerily— Winter is coming we know it," they say; "But for the present 'tls joyous and pleasant, Let's be light hearted and laugh while we may!"

For the trees, birds and flowers in Our Lady's Garden, September is a gala month, for Our Lady's birthday was celebrated on the Stn inst. Well, my dear little friends, I think the best way for you to learn how to spend that day so to please Our Lady, will be for you to read that lovely poem by Adelaide Proctor, "Birthday Gifts."

Read it carefully. It will teach you very much, and if you follow its advice you will become more and more dear to Our Lady, and you will obtain grace to "Give her now-to-day-forever, One great gift, the first, the best, Give your heart, and ask her How to give her all the rest,"

NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW FOR OCTOBER, 1892.—A unique feature of the present number of The Review is the leading article by the Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Prime Minister of England in which the author vindicates his policy af Home Rule for Ireland in reply to the criticisms of the Duke of Argyll in the August number of The Review.

The Review takes pleasure in announcing to its readers that an article on the Irish question will also be presented next month from the pen of the Rt. Hon, Arthur J. Balfour, inte Secretary for Ireland. These two articles will doubtless attract wide comment both at home and abroad. "The Excise Law and the Saloons" by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Dean, gives the views of a well-known prelate on an important question; and, "The Real Issue" by Senator Vest, of Missouri, is a strong representation of what he considers to be the most vital principles of the present political campaign. "The Hygiene of the Atmosphere" is an able, scientific treatise by Prof. Samuel Lockwood, a new contributer only neges.

the present political campaign. "The Hygiene of the Atmosphere" is an able, aclentific treatise by Prof. Samuel Lockwood, a new contributor to our pages.

The extraordinary interest excited, particularly in England, by Lady Jeune's article on "London Society" in the May issue of The Review has led Lady Jeune to prepare an answer to the criticisms passed upon her statements and opinions.

"The French Electoral System" is ably described in a paper by Mons. Naquet of the Chamber of Deputies.

"The Paramount Questions of the Campaign," by His Excellency, the Governor of Oregon, is worthy of reading. The advent to our shores of Asiatic cholera gives occasion for the symposium on "Safeguards Against the Cholera" in which Surgeon-General Wyman, President Wilson of the New York Board of Health, Secretary Abbott of the Boston Board of Health, and Dr. Cyrus Edson, give their views concerning the treatment of this dreaded scourge.

An important and interesting collection of Notes and Comments completes a most instructive and valuable number of The Review.

The True Witness will be mailed free for balance of the year to new Subscript of the year to new Subscript of January 1894. Induce or friends to subscribe for the best and cheapchala Canada.
