

Algiers is a modern city with over 500,000 inhabitants, of which the majority are now natives. It rises steeply to a height of 600 feet, and extends for over five miles along the waterfront.