

A consideration of these time-tables will show why it is not possible for us often to meet requests from students to change particular hours in order that they may attend other courses, or because other courses have had their hours changed.

We really need another large lecture theatre, and another small seminar room.

At the beginning of each session one of the worst difficulties in adjusting our time-table arises from the fact that several courses are joint courses for two faculties, and also that they include (in two cases) students from several years; furthermore, all the students of one year are not taking the same other courses.

If you have any questions to ask about our time-table plans or difficulties kindly let me know.

*

Yours very truly,

A Norman Shaw

A. Norman Shaw.

AS

* Graduate colloquia in research rooms, not enumerated here. A few additional tutorials and short courses are also given.

Encl.