

By LORD ACTON

LECTURES ON THE FRENCH REVOLUTION

Edited by JOHN NEVILLE FIGGIS, Litt.D., and REGINALD VERE LAURENCE, M.A.

8vo. 10s. net.

TIMES.—"A conspicuous merit of this volume of lectures is the way in which the author manages to combine a narrative history with a reflective treatment of his subject. The story of the Revolution is almost all told, of course, not without studied compression, but with elements of dramatic and picturesque detail, and sometimes even of minute archaeological curiosity which, apart from the high moral atmosphere, make it a book of great fascination as well as of valuable instruction."

DAILY NEWS.—"Constitutes perhaps the most impressive legacy of the great scholar. No brief review can convey an adequate idea of the strength, the eloquence, the boundless knowledge, the sureness of touch, the piercing insight of this wonderful book."

LECTURES ON MODERN HISTORY

Edited with an Introduction by JOHN NEVILLE FIGGIS, Litt.D., and REGINALD VERE LAURENCE, M.A.

8vo. 10s. net.

TIMES.—"The treatment is personal, fresh, and original throughout. Lucidity is unflinching. Learning is marshalled behind every paragraph, and almost behind every sentence, and yet is never obtrusive. The lectures are equally adapted to illuminate the scholar and to introduce the novice to the study of the mighty scheme of human affairs in its dynamic flow. The selection of detail is governed by consummate judgment; and frequently information drawn from sources alien to the matter in hand is dropped into its place with a sureness and precision which astonishes; controversial questions, when introduced, are legitimately brought forward as an illustration of historical method, and not as the diversions and digressions of an overstocked mind."

ENGLISH HISTORICAL REVIEW.—"Masterpieces of lucid statement, of suggestive and stimulating criticism. Everywhere, whether the lecturer be sketching the salient features of the sixteenth century or of the eighteenth, whether he be dealing with Italy or America, we feel the sureness of touch of one who is familiar with every detail."

MACMILLAN AND CO., LTD., LONDON.