

gress to the north of Nootka Sound, he found the Indians without fire-arms, but furnished with some clothing and ornaments, principally Spanish manufacture. The Indians accompanying him were not understood by those on that coast, and appeared to be perfect strangers to one another. It was with difficulty he could reconcile them to him as a white man, on account, as he understood, of some injury given them by people of his colour a few days before that time. These are supposed to have been the Americans from the port of New-York, who had touched there in their trade with China.

After remaining a few days and making the necessary observations, he returned and bro't along with him some valuable skins of the sea otter, and other natural curiosities, peculiar to that coast; but as the gentleman himself has it in idea to go soon to London, I have little doubt but he will meet with the reward due to his exertions, and give to the world an account of the wild and uninhabited tract he traversed.

✻
FINIS.
✻