

THURSDAY and FRIDAY

Unusual Sale

Men's Spring Overcoats
Regular $10.00 Value
for $4.99

Men's Fancy Tweed Suits
Regular $12.00 value
for $6.59

Union Clothing Company

26 - 28 Charlotte St., opp. City Market
ALEX CORBET, Manager.

THE LONELY GUARD,

NORMAN INNES,

Author of "The Surge of War" (London Magazine, Evesleigh Nash, 1908); "Parson Croft" (Evesleigh Nash, 1907).

(Continued)

The Count was a brilliant talker. I found, a polished man of the world, and much as I loathed him, I had to confess that the journey passed pleasantly enough.

Though, but it was not beneath the trees, and over grew better so I thought, though muddy. It was my companion's praises of the inn at Vornau and the liquor to be had there, that added to my thirst. Not a breath of wind was stirring, and a myriad flies added to our discomfort.

At last Vornau came in sight, the place of our parting, and with a shout to me, von Wogen, who had been difficult in accompanying me, stood to the somewhat leisurely pace of our troop horses, dashed forward as he gave his horse the reins, and disappeared at a gallop. I was left alone, and I turned to the inn, and the landlord setting a table beneath the shade of a neighbouring tree. Bread, cheese, fruit and two glasses of wine were upon the board when we drew rein before the door, and as the troopers took charge of our horses, the Count and I seated ourselves in the shade. In a moment my glass was filled, and von Wogen was drinking to my enjoyment in the castle, to his journey to Salzburg and the success of the Austrian arms. No fault could I find with toasts such as these, no fault with the wine and we two made a leisurely meal, while our men lay not a score yards away with cans beside them.

At length, it must have been after nine, von Wogen called for the reckoning, and as a trooper led up his horse, prepared to mount.

He bade me farewell from the saddle, and must needs grasp my hand, and wish me a prosperous return to the castle. He smiled in my face as he shook the reins.

"Farwell, Captain von Lesly," cried he, "may fortune prosper thee in Rohn."

Away he rode down the street, as I drained my glass—the second flask was but half emptied—overjoyed to be rid of the fellow.

My men were still busy with the inn, the Count had provided, and I, tilting the remainder of the unfinished bottle into my glass, lay back in my chair as the gallop of the horse upon the highway grew faint in the distance.

I had good cause to be satisfied. I had come scathless out of a difficult position, the result of my own rashness; nay, with no so I hold, lay the advantage, and above all, I was rid of a knave whose brain wove other schemes for the lady's future, in which, need it be said, I played a part.

How long I sat dreaming before the trost-table with the sunlight filtering through the leaves, I know not, but suddenly I was aware of bottles and glasses being noisily removed by the landlord. I stared about me, blinking; there were folk in the street.

WATCH THE STOMACH.

HAVE YOU ANY OF THESE SYMPTOMS?

constipated bowels with alternate diarrhoea, are you gloomy and miserable?

THEN YOU ARE A DYSPYPTIC.

The cure is careful diet, slow eating, thoroughly chewing the food, avoid drinking at meals.

Keep regular habits, shun stimulants, tone the digestive powers and regulate the stomach and bowels with Burdock Blood Bitters. It has cured the worst forms of dyspepsia, even of twenty-five years duration. Mrs. Geo. Parks, Cooper Ont., was cured; she writes: "I have used Burdock Blood Bitters and find that few medicines can give such great relief in dyspepsia and stomach troubles. I was troubled for a number of years with dyspepsia and could get no relief until I tried R.B.B. It helped me right away and I think it a wonderful remedy. I would recommend it to all sufferers from dyspepsia."

For sale at all Druggists and Dealers.

ladies dead, and buried or fled, or what, thou fool that thou plaguist me."

The honest face of my corporal grew grave in an instant.

"May it please thee, the Countesses of von Rohn rode away with the Count von Wogen some two hours before noon, with a couple of the men for escort. The men returned alone an hour ago in obedience to the Count's orders."

My brain had grown clear in a moment, though as I listened to his simple tale, my tongue seemed tied.

"And the others?" I cried, breaking in upon his speech. "The others?"

As yet they have not returned."

(To be Continued.)

LONG LIFE IN SOUR MILK

Chicago, April 1.—Samuel Fallow, bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church and founder of Christian Psychology—a combination of faith cure and medicine—now in his seventy-third year, believes that men ought to be in their prime at eighty and live to be 120 years old. Here is the explanation he gave in tonight's lecture.

Drink sour milk or pure buttermilk two or three times a day.

Avoid too strenuous living. Go to bed early and get up, with the rising sun.

Take plenty of exercise of a kind not associated with your actual employment, only "ridgely" the laws of hygiene.

Keep a clear conscience.

Love God and be square with your fellow men.

Drink more sour milk.

The speaker said I am indebted for my material to three sources:

1. The Bible.

2. A treatise published by Prof. Elie Metchnikoff, a French scientist.

3. Science in general.

"Metchnikoff is one of the professors in the Pasteur Institute in Paris, is the greatest exponent in the world of the theories of Bacteria. It is his business to hunt up diseases and their remedies. In a new book he declares that the cause of the reason men do not live to a great age is because under modern conditions the arteries harden with advancing age due to deposits of calcareous substances."

"He has discovered that the poison for this condition is sour milk. The rheumatic stands in bed, the patient in the milk. The principle, he says, is as simple as the sun in the sky."

"The days of man are three and ten years."

Now, as to scientific theory. Research has proved that the multiple of ages added to the lives of aged persons is three and a half—that is, if they ordinarily live six times the length of their natural life, they will live to be 120 years. Multiplying that by six gives 720 years.

According to the laws that govern the animals of the lower order, if a man lives to be 120 years, he will have lived almost three and a half—that is, if he lives a third of his existence according to the laws of the lower order, he will live to be 120 years.

This is not natural and the reason is that man does not take the proper precautions until too late.

The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

1. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

2. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

3. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

4. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

5. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

6. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

7. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

8. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

9. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

10. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

11. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

12. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

13. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

14. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

15. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

16. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

17. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

18. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

19. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

20. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

21. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

22. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

23. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

24. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

25. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

26. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

27. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

28. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

29. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

30. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

31. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

32. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

33. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

34. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

35. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

36. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

37. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

38. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

39. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

40. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

41. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

42. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

43. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

44. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

45. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

46. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

47. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

48. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

49. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

50. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

51. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

52. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

53. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

54. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

55. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

56. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

57. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

58. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

59. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

60. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

61. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

62. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

63. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

64. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

65. The rates of the average Chicagoan for reaching 120 years are:

GOVERNMENT AXE FALLS ON OFFICIALS

Ottawa, April 1.—"It is my duty to inform the house," said Sir Wilfrid Laurier on the orders of the day being called, "what action has been taken by the government on the report of the civil service commission."

"The house is aware that on two previous occasions I stated that the report, in so far as it concerned the department of marine and fisheries called for consideration and action by the government. My honorable friend, who is in charge of that department, has been engaged for some time, investigating his department, so as to determine in what respect it could be reformed. In the discharge of that duty one of the officers of that department was suspended by him some few weeks ago."

The Axe Falls.

"Since the report of the commission has been laid on the table my colleagues have come to the conclusion that he should also be put under suspension two other prominent officers. It is only just to the deputy minister of that department that I should say in this connection that on two previous occasions he tendered his resignation and that matter is in the hands of the minister for consideration."

"The house is aware that the report made certain very grave statements with regard to the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but he has thought it advisable to recommend that a royal commission should be issued to investigate the honesty of the officials in that department. The matter is of such a serious character that the minister did not think it advisable for him to deal with that part of the report, but