Immigration Alone will Solve Problems, Says Col. Dennis of the C. P. R.

(Cor. Financial Post.)
Winnipeg—When Col. J. S. Dennis, commissioner of colonization and development of the C. P. R., brought his plan for immigration to Winnipeg he found the business interests of the city in receptive humor. The Board of Trade and affiliated interests will probably get behind a campaign to stimulate immigration in the Dominion's immigration policy for it is increasingly evident that the business men of the west are aroused to Col. Dennis' declaration "that colonization and development is the most serious problem with which Canada is faced today as the foundation upon which the solution of our railway, industrial and business problems must be based."

The reaction to the plan for further settlement of Canada is expressed by the Manitoba Free Press in the assertion that "every live business man in Canada knows there can be no solution of the great problems with which Canada is faced until there is greater development, more business and more population."

The mystery of Canada's "lost" two and a half millions excites the Winnipeggers. "The census of 1911 shows that we had in Canada a population of seven and a half millions. The immigration returns show between 1911 and 1921, 1,800,000 immigrants came into Canada. Our vital statistics show that during the ten-year period to 1921 the annual increase to our population amounted to 1,900,000. These figures total 11,000,000. As the census of 1921 shows our population as eight and a half millions what became of the other two and a half millions?"

The Manitoba Free Press considers that in trying to solve our present problems of immigration "it would be profitable to try and find out why we lost the two and a half millions," and advances the suggestion that "insofar as conditions in this country were responsible would it not be well to identify these conditions and then see if anything can be done in the way of improving them? This might bring under review matters of the tariff, of taxation, of banking facilities, or railway rates."

The present mission of Col. Dennis to Winnipeg synchronizes with his pioneer trip to the Canadian West. "I arrived in this city fifty years ago this week," he told his great audience "when there was nothing here but a small village of 1,000 persons and nothing west of here to the Pacific." During these fifty years his activities have been entirely with colonization and development of western Canada which he insists justifies him in making the statement that today colonization and development is Canada's most important problem.

"Our national debt today amounts to $2,800,000,000 or an annual charge of $275 for every man, woman and child in Canada. The interest on our national debt amounts to $110,000,000, or an annual charge of $16 per head. The total revenue of Canada in 1913 was about $168,000,000.

"We have in Canada one mile of railway in operation for every 236 people, or in the four western provinces one mile in operation for every 110.

"We have in the three western prairie provinces over 25,000,000 acres of land suitable and available for settlement with fifteen miles on each side of the existing railway line, non-productive and at present uncultivated. In Ontario last year there were over 5,000 improved farms occupied and in Quebec and the maritime provinces many hundreds of improved farms, also uncultivated and lying idle.

"Unfortunately we have no definite colonization and development policy in effect today. Previous to the war we were obtaining large numbers of desirable people and vast amounts of money from Great Britain to aid in the colonization and development of our country, but the war, of course, closed it all down, and since the war nothing seems to have been done to deal with this problem on a broad and comprehensive line.

"It is hopeless for us to expect that the money which we hope to put into the development of the vast natural resources with which nature has blessed Canada can in any way be obtained from Great Britain or Europe.

"We must naturally look to the United States for the money needed. The foregoing facts make it perfectly clear that unless and until a particular and comprehensive policy of colonization and development is adopted and the necessary staff and appropriations provided to carry on the work aggressively, there is little hope of this great problem being solved in the near future, and it is also perfectly clear that unless the business organizations in Canada take and promote interest in the solution of this problem, the outlook is not very bright."
