NATIONAL BANQUET

HONOR OF VETERAN

CHIEF OF LIBERALS

(Special to Times.)

Ottawa, May 13.-The Liberal members of parliament this morning held a caucus at which their leader was not present and to which he was not invited. The event was unique.

Today Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier are celebrating the forty-sixth anniversary of their marriage, and as a symbol of the event and the happy years which followed, the Liberal members sent their chief and his helpmate an immense bunch of roses, one for each of the forty-six years.

It was decided to give a banquet in the near future to Sir Wilfrid to celebrate the fortieth anniversary of his first public speech, delivered as a young man just out of college. It also will celebrate the fortieth anniversary of his first speech in parliament.

The banquet will be national in character. Liberal leaders from all parts of the dominion will be invited to rally around the board for the night to honor their leader and promote their cause.

In Lacken, Brussels, is to be erected a wireless station which will be 1092 feet high, 108 feet higher than the Eiffel Tower. It will be used also for the study of meteorology.

BRADSTREET'S ON TRADE

Two views of trade and industry present themselves to the close observer at present. One is the profound feeling of depression ruling in most lines devoted to supplying everyday wants. The other is the feeling that the new banking system has started off under favorable conditions as regards personnel, the growth of the feeling that the railways will receive additional compensation, and the belief that the present or prospective lower prices of staples, and particularly foods, augur well for future industrial activities.

There is, too, the feeling grows that a period has been set to what seems like an age-long output of new legislation, state and national, and that a "day of rest" is at hand during which the new laws may be allowed to work out their real or fancied benefits. In fact, evidences are not absent that the underlying spirit of American optimism, while obscured for a while, is not dead; that the past years of short-handed buying have created good-will vacuum in stocks of goods which will need to be filled, and that a very large potential demand for products of American agriculture and industry will assert itself, provided that the year's crops, after all the great basic feature, turn out well, and that a pause will occur in the typically American pastime of abusing conditions as they exist and of trying to make all men and things suddenly righteous by enactment.

For this the poor results of most of last year's crops, the consequent slow collections with frequent requests for extensions, the undeniably disappointing results of winter and spring trade due to past unfavorable weather, tariff changes, so-called hostile legislation, demands for regulation or investigation, war, and a variety of other real or assumed causes are all held varying responsible. Against this unquestionable depression of the moment, some of which really seems purely mental, are to be found some favorable aspects as to the future. First of these might be mentioned the phenomenal promise of the early or autumn sown crops, such as winter wheat and rye; the generally very good fruit crop outlook, the fine condition of the soil for planting the later crops, such as spring wheat, oats, corn and cotton; the more pacific appearance of things Mexican, the feeling that the new banking system has started off under favorable conditions as regards personnel, the growth of the feeling that the railways will receive additional compensation, and the belief that the present or prospective lower prices of staples, and particularly foods, augur well for future industrial activities.

Opposition to Transfer of Seat of Government to Delhi - A Financial View

The agitation against the transfer of the seat of government from Calcutta to Delhi is steadily gathering force. Calcutta has always been against it, but Madras has now joined in the protest, and even in Bombay, which was the principal center favoring the change, opinion is beginning to be modified.
