FAITH OF OUR FATHERS. Faith of our Fathers ! living still In spite of dungeon, fire, and sword : O how our hearts beat high with joy Whene'er we hear that glorious word ;

Faith of our Fathers! Holy Faith ! We will be true to thee till death ! Our Fathers, chain'd in prisons dark,

Were still in heart and conscience free How sweet would be their children's fate, If they, like them, could die for thee ! Faith of our Fathers ! Holv Faith !

We will be true to thee till death ! Faith of our Father ! we will love

Both friend and foe in all our strife : And preach thee too, as love knows how By kindly words and virtuous life: Faith of our Fathers ! Holy Faith ! We will be true to thee till death !

The Firesibe. ANDY O'HARA.

BY THE AUTHOR OF THE MISIONARY'S SON. CHAPTER III.

ANDY AT MR. TRUEMAN'S.

AT length our Andy is safely lodged at F .-Eappier than many of his countrymen, he did not have to plunge at once into the wild vortex of a city life, but was placed in a situation where wise and generous friends were near hun. With his gay and kind disposition he speedily became a great favorite with all his countrymen in F. and they amounted to no small number. They liked his fresh, rosy face, his laugh, his joke, his incessant good humor. And though he never took part in any of their carouses, and abstained altogether from the intoxicating cup, they loved him none the less. The priest was the only one who did not like him. He found Andy wondertully deficient in that reverence for him which generally felt by the others. Andy treated him like a common man. He never sought to win his regard or avert his wrath. He seemed utterly indifferent whether he was liked by him or disliked. He never went to "confession;" and in fact it was rumored that Andy had been heard to cali all priests "owld gandhers," an expression which made his friends admire his irage, for as long as they did not suspect him of a tendency toward Protestantism, they would only sough at his indifference to Romanism.

Andy's work was this: Early in the morning he would rise, prepare the work of the house that was allotted to him, get his breakfast, and after family prayers, which Mr. Trueman kept up morning and evening, he would go off with is team to haul. He would remain out all day at this work, and finally return home at about sunset. The evening would be spent in various ways, the most pleasant of which, to Andy, was a conversation with Mr. Trueman. This gentleman never relaxed in his watchful kindness over the poor lrish boy, but looked after him with a vigilant attention, which was rewarded by the discovery of Andy's upright character and uncommon self-denial

Mr. Trueman had no family, so that he was able to give a considerable portion of his time to Andy. Three or four years previously he had lost a dearly beloved wife. The loss had been severe, and sorrow had preyed heavily upon his spirits. So great was his grief that he had to go away from the place where he had been live ing, and seek relief in traveling. It was while he was on this tour for peace of mind, that he had lighted upon Andy and Ballylin. After his return home he had entered into business with

"And musn't I have to pray to the virgin, or to Saint Payther an' Saint Paul?" "No, Andy, you will pray to God only. He will hear you for Jesus' sake. Don't you remember that hymn you used to sing in Ballylinn. Andy, about 'He died for you, and he died for me?' What was it !"

"O yes," said Andy. "He came to save our soul from hell; His love no tongue can ever tell: He came to die for you and me-He died in woe on Calvary! " For you he came down from heaven, Andy for you he became a little child ; for you he suf fered, and at last he died, all for you.'

"Why didn't I know all this before ?" cried Andy, starting up in great excitement. "You can know it all now, Andy. He is the friend who comforted your mother. He is the one to whom she prays." "And does she pray to him? And is he her father ?" "Yes, Andy."

Andy clapped his hands in his delight. "O if I only know'd how ! If I only know'd ow !" he exclaimed. "Well, Andy, he has given us his book."

"Heh! the Bible? O is that what the Bible is all about ?" cried Andy, as a new light burst in upon his mind.

"Yes; and I will show you, Andy, where i tells about Jesus, the blessed Lord Jesus, and all his life, his love, his sufferings, and his death ; and you shall read it, Andy, and learn that the dearest friend you ever had is that Blessed One whom you have never yet known !"

"O may the blessin's of Heaven be on you honor's head !" said Andy fervently. "Let me begin at wonst. I wudn't wait another hournot one. Will you show me then? Can I read it now-now ?" he exclaimed with eagerness.

"Yes Andy you may begin now. It is a good time for you. Here is a Bible in which I have already written your name. It is yours. If you read it you will gain the blessed Jesus for your friend. The God of your mother will be your God, and while you live you shall have pleasures far different from anything which this world can offer.

reater energy than ever, and was seeking to find that comfort in public life and business which had been denied him on the domestic hearth .--Still, though he was incessantly busy, he was able, as we have said, to spare some little time to Andy, and do many things for his advantage, the principal of which was teaching him to read more perfectly,

At such times Mr. Trueman would converse with him somewhat in this way: "Well, Andy, so your mother managed to keep her Bible out of sight in her little garret ?" "Ay, yer honor, that she did, Father O'Donoghue could niver for the life of him find out anything about it.

" It was a good thing for her. It was a great comfort, Andy.

"That it was, sir. When anything went wrong she was off to her Bible. If she got into any difficulty she made for the garret, an' so she jist didn't care much for any throuble." "Ah, it's a blessed thing."

" It must be, sir."

"Did you ever think of looking into it, Andy ?"

"Yis, sir, once or twice; but ye know sir, I couldn't read well at all at all. Loould make out the Bible. A loouldn't understand it."

"Have you ever tried to read it lately?"
"No, sir," said Andy.
"Well, why not, Andy? You can read well the mough to understand it now. I will show you where you can commence. The Bible, you know, is the word of God,' it tells us what we must do to bim had they not all been afraid of punish." Thus Andy had to pass through the fite. I to be Continued.]

"You will go in your mother's ways, will you, Andy ?" said Mr. Trueman kindly. "You have the chance to do so, and a far better opportunity of learning the truth than she has."

"She was in great perplexity till you towld her what to do," said Andy thoughtfully; "since then she was happier."

The comfort that she took in it, Andy, you can take; the help she gained you can have ; and P instead of being all in the dark about death and resi-late the other world, you will be able to look forward
