LOYALIST DAY WILL BE HONORED WITH SALUTE OF 21 GUNS--ANNIVERSARY SERVICE AT TRINITY CHURCH SUNDAY EVENING

One hundred and twenty-four years ago today the Loyalists landed in St. John, and today the "City of the Loyalists" celebrates the anniversary. The school children of the city always have the 18th of May as a holiday, but this year the day comes on Saturday and the children are exempted from their day of recreation. To make up for this oversight on the part of the man that makes the calendar, the school board decided at its last meeting that Monday, the 27th of May, would be observed as a holiday, in accordance with the section of the common law that provides for no increase in the number of days in the school year if a public holiday fall upon Saturday or Sunday.

By the general public the day is being observed in the usual way. A detachment from No. 2 company of the 3rd New Brunswick Artillery proceeded to Dorchester battery and at high noon a salute of twenty-one guns was fired.

The 15th of May, though not commonly observed with any great display of enthusiasm in this community, is nevertheless a day to be held in lasting remembrance. The day that led to the coming of the Loyalists to this city and province are familiar to all who have any knowledge of Canadian history. The period of French occupation lasted for a century and a half, or to speak more precisely, from the year 1759 to 1841, the year of the port of St. John by Champlain, in 1604, to the occupation of the old fort in Carleton by Col. Monckton on the 10th September, 1768. Under the protection of Fort Frederick and its garrison came the men of Massachusetts a few years later—the Fenwick, Parleys, Leavitts, Simonds, Whites and Hazens—and a little hamlet grew at Fortland Point near the site of the C. R. grain elevator. A quarter of a century after the British flag had been first raised over the ramparts of the old fort in Carleton, St. John may be said to have had its birth. On the memorable 18th of May, 1768, Daniel Leavitt as pilot led up to the anchorage near the Market slip—then called the "Upper Cove"—the most notable fleet that has in all the lapse of years ever entered the port of St. John. There were more than twenty transport ships under convoy of British war frigates, and on board were 3,000 souls. They pitched their tents on the shore and the warlike exiles were once more on British soil. The outlook was unpromising. Many of the newcomers had been born and bred to luxury and ease. They were not the type of men and women usually found among the adventurers who go forth as the vanguard of civilization.

One of our local historians has observed: Had the victory in the revolutionary struggle been won by the Royal cause to remain and assist in building up the new nation which they had founded. Instead of this they committed one of the most stupendous acts of shortsighted folly ever perpetrated by a civilized people. They persecuted of banishment against the persons and acts of confiscation against the estates of the Loyalists. They drove them out poor in purse indeed, but rich in experience, determination, energy, education and other qualities which build up states, and with hearts fired and energies stimulated with hatred of republicanism. They drove them out, 30,000 strong to build up a rival nation at their very doors, which perhaps would never have had an existence but for the rash folly of those who would be little or no business.

who persecuted the Loyalists. The first framed building of consequence was used by the Loyalists for a variety of public purposes. Its dimensions were 38 by 23 feet and it stood on German street. In it were held the meetings of the common council. There, too, met the courts of justice. On Sundays it was the meeting place for public worship. The Rev. Dr. Samuel Cooke, formerly of Shrewsbury, New Jersey, was the first officiating clergyman. On his arrival at St. John, September 2, 1768, he set to work to improve the building which he found in a very unfinished state. He "called a vestry" and in three days he collected $20 by means of which galleries were erected and the seating capacity doubled. "After all," he observes in one of his letters, "this is only a temporary affair, till the people's circumstances shall enable them to build a proper church, which may be a credit and ornament to the place." In this primitive place of worship Dr. Cooke officiated for nearly a year when he removed, at Governor Carleton's desire, to Fredericton, which had been fixed upon as the capital of the new province. At the Loyalist anniversary service in Trinity Church tomorrow evening the preacher will be Dr. Samuel Watson, of Akron, Ohio, who is a lineal descendant of Rev. Dr. Cooke, and a clergyman of much eloquence and ability.

AFGHANS BOYCOTT ALL BRITISH GOODS

Anti-Foreign Movement Spreads Throughout the Dominions of the Amerer.

CALCUTTA, May 15.—The Mullahs of Afghanistan have started a boycott of British goods.

At a meeting of Mullahs, held at Kabul, the Amerer was denounced for his liberal tendencies, and especially for bringing foreign innovations into the country. The Mullahs resolved that it was unlawful for Mahomedans to purchase foreign goods, as being against the interests of Afghanistan. They especially condemned the use of British sugar, in consequence of objections to the processes of manufacture. Violent speeches were made by several of the Mullahs, and their language was so threatening that the Amerer's eldest son, the Sirdar Inayatulla Khan, dispersed other similar gatherings, and a number of the ringleaders were arrested.

According to advices from the other side of the border, the anti-foreign movement is spreading throughout the country, and the Amerer has given orders for it to be sternly repressed. Mullahs who preach against the British are to be punished severely.

BALDNESS.

"It is sometimes stated that ultra-violet rays of the sunlight will cure baldness." The Scientific American says that the best and easiest way to try the violet ray treatment, is to go about in the sunlight without any form of covering for the head. The authority holds that if all persons did this there would be little or no baldness.
