AN INDIAN RULER WAS ASSASSINATED
CALCUTTA, June 15.—The mystery has not yet been solved of the murder of the Maharaja Bahadur, of Bomba in the Baghalpore district of Bengal. He was mysteriously assassinated at a village camp ten miles from Madhupara. He was walking into his tent when he was fired at with explosive pistols at close quarters. Before he died, however, he had just time to scribble a few words on a piece of paper nominating his youngest grandson as his heir.
Immediately after hearing of the murder the district magistrate proceeded to the scene. His investigations have resulted in the arrest of two of the personal followers of the Maharaja.
