DEATH AND BURIAL OF HON. MICHAEL DRATH AND BURIAL OF HON, MICHARL ADAMS—One who frequently visited the bedside of the dying senator in his last days says he reminded one of an expiring candle that flickers, seems about to go out, and then flames brightly up. The watchers by his bedside would expect every breath to be his last, and then he would suddenly become strong, aniwould suddenly become atrong, ani-mated and cheerful. But he was weakwould suddenly become strong, animated and cheerful. But he was weakening all the time, and every hemorrhage left him with less strength than he had before. He was wasted to a skeleton when he gave up the struggle for life and breathed his last Sunday evening. There was a vast concourse of people from different parts of the country and alsewhere at the funeral this forenoon. The procession reached from the house to the church. Requiem high mass was eaid over the remains at St Mary's church and all that was mortal of Northumberland's gifted son was laid in the grave. The pall bearers were col Call, John T Johnston, of Bathurst; E Sinclair, John O'Brien, R A Lawlor and PB Wheeler. There were 34 gentlemen from Bathurst; including Father Varrily and Messrs Henry White, John Young, O Turgeon, Frank Curran, W F Stacey, Henry Bishop, George Gilbert, P J Venoit, Dr Duncan, J J Harrington and T M Barns.—[Chatham World.
