Entry—The prisoner was indicted for breaking open a stable door in Beckwith and taking out horses and using them. The stable and horses were claimed by the widow of the late James Leach, who, with his father, lived and worked on the same farm.

The farm belonged to the old man, and he made over half of it to his son, on which half the buildings stood. The son died a few months ago, and the widow claimed possession of balf the lot and all the personal property. The old man claimed half the personal property, and ordered the defendant, another son of his, to break open the stable door and take out the horses.
