Candy not a Luxury

IT would be folly indeed if a belief detrimental to the public welfare—and proven false—was allowed to last any longer.
That false belief is that candy is a luxury.

Candy is food in one of its most useful and attractive forms.

All elements used in the composition of Candy are recognized useful foods.

Candy contains large quantities of sugar, some fats such as butter; also nuts, fruits, corn syrup, chocolate and flavoring.

Combine these ingredients in proper proportions and you have a balanced ration—the high food value of which is recognized by all leading food and medical authorities.

Sugar supplies the bodily demand for fuel.
Fruits and nuts produce essential nutriment; chocolate is a most nourishing fat food and delightful stimulant. The flavorings stimulate the digestive organs and increase the flow of saliva and gastric fluid.

Eat more candy!

Medical science has established its value as an energy-producing food.

Serve Candy as a Dessert.
It is a Splendid Food.

Visit the Attic

It takes genuine courage to visit the attic. Any article that has for the time being passed its usefulness is "put in the attic." All the family heirlooms, which have been kept for sentimental reasons, find their way here. The attic becomes the discard of the house.

Just climb up there and look around. You will say "Where in the world did all this stuff come from?" "What shall I do with it?" Well, the first thing to do is get a copy of this paper and turn to the WANTED—MISCELLANEOUS classification. There you will find a list of reliable merchants who buy second-hand goods. Phone one of these men and they will call and give you a surprisingly fair price. This will soon rid your upstairs of all the moth-breeding, dust-gathering things that are no longer serviceable to you.
You will also be ahead of the game financially.
