Kinsella and Daly, it is alleged, stele a valies from an English tourist, who was on a Grand Trunk train en route from Detroit to Buffalo. The valies, which is Said to have contained papers worth thousands af

After the arrest of Brown and Daly, Kinsella kept away from their room, but the detectives located him late yesterday afternoon and placed him under arrest. Kinsella admitted his association with Daly and Brown. He seid that he and Daly, not knowing the value of the papers in the value taken from the Grand Trunk train, had torn them up while they were in Weodstock. This information was wired to the officers who took Daly away. They at once wired back that they would return to Buffalo for Kinsella as soon as possible.

STABBED AT LINDSAY.

Serious Mishap.

Lindsay, Jan. 7.—At 9 o'clock yesterday morning a man named Henry Syers was found lying in an open shed at the Central House, benumbed with cold and liberally bathed in blood that flowed from a nasty two-inch wound on the inside of his thigh, near the main artery of the leg. Syers says that he came to town from Peterboro on the 9.45 train Thursday night, and that when walking from the station he was accosted by a stranger who persisted in walking with him. He turned into the hotel yard to evade the stranger, who followed him, stabbed him, and robbed him of $30. Syers was taken to the home of his son in town. There is no clue to his assailant's identity.

at Educationist's Memory Honored by

Well deserved is the post-mortem henor bestowed on the late Principal Grant, in the dedication to his memory of the new Convocation Hall at Queen's University. As Grant Hall will the fine new building take its place among the historic educational structures in Kingston; and thus will the name of a famous Canadian printer page of a famous Canadian printer. structures in Kingston; and thus will the name of a famous Canadian principal be perpetuated for many ages. While outside opinion may differ on the character and capacity of the late Principal Grant, in the university itself it is accepted as an axiom that he was the greatest educationist ever produced in Canada. Students and alumni regard his memory with peculiar affection, and most heroically have they wrought to rear this hall as a token of their love and esteem for the principal who spent the best years of his life in the service of one of Canada's greatest colleges.

Gift From the Students.

At the opening ceremonies at the recent dedication the part played by the students was emphasized by Rev. James Wallace of Lindsay. In a brief history of the movement, the speaker said that the original intention had been to erect a convocation hall and to name it in honor of the County of Frontenac. The residents of the county were thereupon invited to contribute $20,000, but when the bylaw was submitted it was defeatbylaw was submitted it was detected, much to the regret of Principal Grant. Then the students determined to raise the sum themselves, but the principal requested that this course be abandoned, as he did not wish the be abandoned, as he did not wish the young men to undergo the hardships this would entail in a great many cases. They persevered, however, and succeeded in raising $34,000. Even then Principal Grant desired the name Frontenac Hall, but the students, probably for the first time, disregarded his wishes, and Grant Hall was chosen instead.

Hall was chosen instead. The Message to the Students.

Sir Sandford Fleming, in accepting the gift of the hall, as vice-chancellor of the university, referred to the late principal in those words:

"A few months before he died he addressed you students for the last time in old Convacation Hall. On that occasion he explained to you the secret of his life and impressed upon you one great lesson in these words: The road to success which satisfies is through singleness of eye and from a deep-rooted conviction that we owe to the community unthat we owe to the community unselish service, allogether apart from the question of whether the community is or is not grateful. If I have done any good this is the explanation.' Having given you his secret he prayed God that you would turn it to good use. Then he pictured to you a vision of the future which had been given him. 'Our university, strong in your love, an everincreasing power for good, our courtry pressing forward; our Empire champion of liberty, civil and religious, intellectual and commercial.'"
There are men now living who can

There are men now living who can look back 70 years to the time when Queen's University was but a dream in the minds of the devout founders of the Presbyterian Church in Canof the Presbyterian Church in Canada. It was about 1835 that these men undertook the herculean task of establishing a university which would provide a liberal education for their sons and a theological training for the ministers of the Church in Canada. At the time these fastilities were sadly lacking in Upper Canada, grammar schools being few, while King's College, Toronto, the only institution of its kind in the country, admitted only students who would subscribe to the Thirty-nine Articles, which, of course, Presbyterians could which, of course, Presbyterians could not do. The aim of the founders of Queen's was to establish a university which would be Presbyterian only in its theological course, its other de-partments more truly fulfilling the true function of a university in ap-pealing to all beliefs.

A Priscipal But No University.

In 1841 the Royal charter was granted to these gentlemen—11 clergymen and 14 laymen—and the work of raising funds began at once. The members of the Church in Canada responded heartily, and in Scotland the parent Church made a grant to the infant university. The Colonial Committee, evidently under the misapprehension that the scheme was farther advanced, met at Edinburgh, and thereupon appointed the first principal—Rev. Thomas Liddell, who arrived in Canada before the foundations of Queen's had been laid. As a number of students were also desirous of presenting themselves at once, it was decided to secure a small house for temporary use, until the proper buildings could be erected. Kingston was chosen as the home of the institution, as it was then the seat of Government of the united provinces, a classical and a mathematical master were secured, and the real work of the university began.

The Coming of Grant.

Rev. John Cook. of Quebec. suc-

matical master were secured, and the real work of the university began.

The Coming of Grant.

Rev. John Cook, of Quebec, succeeded Principal Machar, and was succeeded by Rev. Dr. Lietch, a Scottish clergyman, who was followed in 1864 by Rev. Dr. Snodgrass of St. Paul's, Montreal. It was on the retirement of Dr. Snodgrass of St. Paul's, Montreal. It was on the retirement of Dr. Snodgrass in 1877 that Rev. George Munro Grant of Halliax, became principal of Queen's, he being the first native-born Canadian fo fill that position. Under Principal Glant the university became one of the greatest seats of learning in Canada, but the life-work of a remarkable man stretches between the little college presided over by Dr. Snodgrass and the magnificent institution at present in the capable hands of Principal Gordon. One building after another was erected, one after another source of income opened up, one faculty after another added, until the dream of the most enthusiastic of the 25 founders of Queen's has been more than realized. Greater work still lies before Queen's Her real history is yet of the future.
