

Poetry.
"SHE NEVER TOLD HER LOVE."
SHARPSPEAR.
Oh! it is sweet to hush the sigh
That trembles on the lip of beauty!
To wipe the dew that wets the eye
Of her that pines 'tween love and duty!

Oh! it is sweet to soothe the breast
That throbbing swells with tender feeling!
To wipe the cheek in dimples drest,
Where languid sorrow's tears were stealing.

Too oft, in beauty's gayest hour,
The heart within is cold and glooming;
Too oft the smile is like the flower
That lives not—feels not—yet is blooming.

Ah! hapless woman may not tell
She loves—the love each glance revealing.
Her heart may beat—her bosom swell—
Her only hope is in concealing.

And 'mid the weight of inward care,
Her eyes with crystal light beaming;
The smile still seems to linger there,
But sorrow's flood within is streaming.

So may be seen at eve's last hour,
When calm and bright the moon is shining,
The lily's spotless, virgin flower
In tears, its tender head declining.

Miscellaneous.
The Monk's Temerity.—A small distance from the botanic garden is a monastery of Capuchins, famous for its Carneria, or subterranean chapel, the ornaments of which are composed of the relics of mortality, bones and skulls. When a monk dies his body is eviscerated, dried on the terraced roof, and then, clothed in the monastic habit, it is placed in a niche in the Carneria. Several of these spectre-like corpses are to be seen, slowly mouldering away before the eyes of the beholder. One of them holds a scroll containing a mournful but neglected truth—"What thou art, I was; what I am, thou shalt be." It has a strange and mournful interest, that old monastery, with its long passages and narrow cells. A ghost-like air pervades the corridors, and makes you feel as though a spectre were airming himself behind you. I am not very nervous, but I detected in my mind a lurking desire to look over my shoulder as the monk who accompanied me related the following tale:—One evening, he and several of the inmates had been conversing about the Carneria, and its cold and silent dwellers. One after another had told of fearful appearances and strange sounds disturbing, at midnight, the quiet of the monastery. In the midst of these legends, a strange desire seized one of the party. He expressed a wish to descend alone with a light into the abode of the dead. The others attempted to dissuade him, but in vain. With an air of bravado, and a smile of contempt for what he termed the superstition of his companions, he burst from them, and they continued in awe and silence, listening to his retreating footsteps. The door of the Carneria was heard to open, and, for a few moments, no sound was heard as the listeners gazed fearfully at each other. Suddenly a piercing shriek rang through the passages of the monastery, and hardly had the echoes ceased, when it was followed by a succession of cries for help. Lights were procured, and the whole convent, with the superior at their head, rushed down to the subterranean chapel. On the steps lay the unfortunate victim of his own temerity, gasping in the agonies of death. A nail in the stairs had caught in the hem of his long robe, while ascending to regain his companions; and his excited and superstitious fancy had led him to imagine himself in the grasp of the dead. He was carried to his cell, and died the next day. His withered form, clad in monkish attire, now fills one of the niches of the Carneria.—Notes from Nineveh.

An Irish Mode of Serving a Writ.—Some time since, an Irish gentleman, whose solicitor had vainly endeavored to serve a writ on an ex-M. P. for an Irish borough, who resides at the west end of the metropolitan suburbs, hit upon the following mode: having sealed a stone bottle with an imposing crest, and marked it "potheen," he forwarded it by an intelligent lad of thirteen, who was previously well instructed, as a present from a friend in the West-end, with directions to be delivered only to himself. The bait took. The old Irish follower who acts as duenna to Mr. —, as his guardian against the too captivating approaches of bailiffs, did not think there was anything to apprehend from a child, bearing a bottle of the "native." She never read Virgil, and knew nothing of the "Timo Danaos." The master was called, and the present handed duly over. "There is a note, I believe, in the wrapper, sir," observed the messenger; "perhaps it would require an answer." The ex-M. P. undid the newspaper in which the present was folded, and took out an envelope. "There's a writ in that, sir," cried the youngster, "you served!" and bounding through the passage, was out of sight in an instant, while the ex-senator looked as if he was converted into stone. Molly, with a wet dishcloth, which she flung after the lad, foamed with rage, at being made the involuntary instrument of a ruse. Seeing her master quite out of sorts after dinner, she philosophically urged him to make the best use of a bad bargain, and take some of the "potheen," opening the bottle for the purpose; who can express her indignant amazement at finding the contents were "agua pura!" She vented a volley of oaths in mingled Celtic and Saxon, against the "hang-gallows gossamer" by whom she had thus doubly deceived.

Difference between Make and Construct.—Omnibuses are generally constructed to hold 15, but somehow they are made to hold 18, and on a wet night frequently more than that.

The Sea Serpent Again.—The serpent has made his appearance off Cork. A Mr. Travers, who was out yachting, saw him rubbing his scales against the beacon on the Barrel rocks, and fired at him with a rifle, when he leaped 30 fathoms out of the water, and instantly disappeared. The scales which he left upon the beacon are preserved, and may be seen at the Horseshoe coast-guard station. His eyes were observed to be of immense size, about nine inches across the ball.—All the fish in Courtmarsherry Bay had been driven ashore by him for some days previously.

A Strange Beast.—While Van Amburgh's collection was entering New Haven, not long since, the elephant completely enveloped in a huge blanket, reaching nearly to the ground, was very leisurely engaged in picking with his proboscis, the end of which was only exposed to view, the fugitive straws of hay, which were scattered about the streets; observing which a son of the Emerald Isle among the bystanders exclaimed—"Be jabers! an' what sort o' baste is that, to be ating hay with his tail?"

An Editorial Hint.—M. Soyer, writing in the Western Times a glowing eulogy on the people of Exeter, adds in a postscript: "When in my culinary department in London, I mean immediately to perfect the Exeter pudding, which has already given such universal satisfaction, and send you a correct receipt of it, if you would give it publicity."—Our contemporary, within a parenthesis, suggests, "Why not send the pudding? We will cheerfully insert it in the proper quarter."

Should the eye, or any other part, be blackened by a fall, a blow, or running against any hard substance, apply a cloth wrung out of very warm water, and renew it until the pain ceases. The moisture and heat liquify the blood, and send it back to its proper channel.

Exhibition of Industry of All Nations.—Great preparations are making for the Exhibition of Industry in London (England) in 1851. The following is the inventory of glittering objects, which, after dazzling the eyes of the visitors, are to be presented as an offering from her Eastern subjects to Queen Victoria:—"A large tent with gilt poles, the covering of finest cashmere shawl cloth, all over embroidered with gold and silver;" "An eider of beautiful opaque, gold round the top forming a radiant centre set in diamonds and rubies;" "A magnificent couch and six chairs, of carved ivory work presented by the Nawab Nazim to her Majesty;" "A couch cushion worked in gold and silver thread, with the names of Victoria and Albert, the initials being diamonds, and the other letters in pearls of large size;" "A hundred and twenty life-size figures, representing the various occupations of Hindoos, with working implements complete;" "And a very extensive assortment of native jewellery and gold ornaments from Delhi and Cuttack."

Curious Association.—Mr. Irving, who had just returned from Ireland, related some amusing particulars of his peregrinations through the Liberties of Dublin. "I entered," he said, "a miserable cabin, in which an old woman was smoking a pipe by the fire. Seeing three coarse portraits on the wall, I asked her who they were? 'Sure that's St. Paul on the right.' 'And this?' 'An' sure, isn't that St. Peter?' 'And he in the centre?' 'And don't you know Pat Donnelly, the bruiser?—sure everybody knows him.'"
—Life of Dr. Chalmers, Vol. II.

An extraordinary likeness of her Majesty is stamped on a piece of rosewood lately cut by Mr. Henry Deslandes, of Jersey, for manufacturing purposes. It is one of the most curious "freaks" of the kind we have ever seen.

What's in a Name?—The reporter of the Times, in giving an account of the Peace Congress at Frankfort, says that he heard one of the door-keepers pointing out to a visitor the person of Cobden, with the words, "Das its Coby." This is not worse than our English janitors, who invariably make a fearful hash of the names of foreigners. The Nepaulesse Ambassador (who has just left us for Paris, which is so crowded that Rum Juggar could hardly find a bed, and Sherris Mutty—ce chero Mutty, as the French call him—was compelled to sleep in a cockloft)—the Nepaulesse, we were about to say, was always known by the humbler class of Londoners as the New Police Ambassador, there being a vague notion about town that his mission was in some way connected with the establishment of a police force in the East, for the detection of the light-fingered portion of the dark-faced population. The "Das its Coby," of the Frankfort door-keeper, is no worse than the "there goes Ibrahim Parker!" with which Ibrahim Pacha used to be saluted by the ganimerie of London.

A Sogacious Ass.—At the Sligo Assizes, Owen Gethin was arraigned for having stolen an ass, the property of Patrick Feeney. Patrick Feeney proved the loss of the animal, which was subsequently traced to the prisoner's possession. Chief Baron—How did you know the ass was yours? Witness—Well I knew him: there was no mistaking his legs.—(laughter). Chief Baron—Had you any mark upon him? Witness—Faix I hadn't but he had marks upon himself.—(laughter). He had lumps on his knees and on his back, and one on his nose.—(loud laughter). Clerk of the Crown—Had you any other reason for knowing the animal was yours? Witness—Yes, I knew his voice.—(loud laughter). Chief Baron—Whose voice? Witness—The voice of my ass, my lord.—(laughter)—the minute he saw me, he threw up his tail and roared.—(loud laughter). Chief Baron—Roared! who roared with joy; we were together for the last five years, he knew me well, and I would know his voice twenty miles off. The prisoner was convicted.

NEW BOOT & SHOE ESTABLISHMENT.

GEORGE GOW & JAMES BENZIE (lately in the employ of Gow & Orme) respectfully announce to the inhabitants of town and country, that they have commenced business in the above line, in Wyndham Street, immediately opposite Mr. Daniel Linderman's Blacksmith Shop, under the firm of "Gow & Benzie."

As G. & B.'s Boots and Shoes will be entirely of their own workmanship, or manufactured under their immediate inspection, they believe the quality will be such as to insure a preference over imported Sale Work, though offered at lower prices.

Long experience in some of the best shops in the Metropolis of England, by one of the firm, enables them to offer

Gentlemen's Dress Boots of a style and quality which have never been surpassed in Guelph; and the long practice of the other in

Ladies' Dress Boots gives them good grounds to anticipate a liberal share of public patronage.

STRONG BOOTS AND SHOES, of all sizes, and of the best material and workmanship, made to order.

LEATHER AND PEGS by Retail, for Cash only.

HIDES and TALLOW taken in exchange.

Guelph, Aug. 19, 1850. 165-1f

JACK'S ALIVE!
REPORTS having recently been current that Jack was shelled up, he just looks out to say that he is not only wide awake, but is now actually selling Men's STRONG DOUBLE-SOLED BOOTS AT 12s. 6d. CASH, and other articles in his line, of superior workmanship and material, at equally low prices.

Jack has had considerable difficulty in bringing down the prices of workmanship in Guelph to the rates paid elsewhere; but now the thing's done, the public will reap the benefit.
