Evening Telegram

W. J. HERDER, - - Proprietor
W. F. LLOYD, - - - Editor

WEDNESDAY, January 7, 1913.

Here and There.

Advertising in the Evening Telegram is a sure paying investment for every shopkeeper—big or small.

The Royal Gazette last night did not contain any announcement of the appointment of the three fish merchants to the Legislative Council. What is the cause of the delay?

The Evening Telegram, the greatest Home Paper among the greatest buying people of Newfoundland, is a practical proposition that no business man can resist.

The Turks appear to be at their last gasp in Adrianople. They have eighty thousand sick there. They are tightly besieged, with no hope of military relief, it is no wonder they are making overtures for capitulation.

Like the Turks in Thrace, the Morris Party is hoping against hope to retain power in Newfoundland. But the outlook is gloomy for both of them. The forces arranged against them are too powerful for them to hold on, when the time of reckoning comes.

The Council of the Fishermen's Union for the District of Port de Grave, will hold the annual meeting at Port de Grave on the 18th instant. A public meeting will be held there at night. The Local Council has passed a resolution inviting us to address that meeting. How does that agree with the Herald falsehood that out-port people avoid us?

The women who "keep the house" are the buyers for families, and they are readers of the Evening Telegram, the Home Paper of Newfoundland. Be sure you tell them through your Home Paper what you have to sell them and that you are ready to serve them with your goods.

The wives of the fishermen are the keenest supporters of the Fishermen's Union movement. And naturally so. A movement which makes for the material comfort of the home very properly appeals to them in these days of dear coal and high taxation on the prime necessities of life.

The trade of the United Kingdom for last year was enormous. The total trade was in the neighborhood of 6,000 million dollars, and showed an increase for the year of nearly 500 million dollars. With such increase the Free Trade policy is not likely to be seriously shaken.

People who arrived here from Placentia to-day, say that for the past two weeks, herring of large size, have been very plentiful at Mussel Harbor and good catches have been made. The storms of Friday and Saturday last wrought havoc with the fishing gear set out to take the herring. At Mussel Harbor 16 feet of nets were swept away and a large number of boats burst their moorings and going on the rocks were dashed in pieces. The store of Jas. Adams, of Bordeaux, was blown down and destroyed with salt and other property. At Arnold's Cove, another premises was levelled with the gale and a lot of property destroyed. Wareham's schooner at Haystack, drove ashore with a lot of salt on board and will likely be a total wreck. The wind was the most severe ever felt in that section.

Libel Suit.

The Proprietor, Mr. W. J. Herder, and the Editor, Mr. W. F. Lloyd, of the Evening Telegram, have instructed Mr. A. J. Herder, B.A., to take a suit for $10,000 damages each against the Evening Herald and the Managing Director and Editor, Hon. P. T. McGrath, for the publication yesterday of damaging reflections on the statements we issued last week and on Monday of this week, in regard to the circulation of the Evening Telegram. On January 2nd, 3rd and 4th, we published a statement which had been sworn to by Mr. W. J. Herder, before Judge Knight, showing the daily circulation of the Evening Telegram each day of issue in 1912, and pointing out that the average circulation per issue was 5,104 copies. On Monday we published a statement showing the circulation for January 2nd, 3rd and 4th of 5,564, 5,518 and 5,625 copies. The charge in the Evening Herald which exception is taken was as follows:—

"The claims of the Telegram's 'circulation liar' remind us strongly of its boast as to 'victory all along the line' in the late political campaign. The imputation is that we are endeavoring to obtain advertisements by false pretences, and that Mr. W. J. Herder has taken a false oath in furtherance of such a course. Mr. A. E. Morine, K.C., has been retained as Counsel in the suit.

Here and There.

The Invermore leaves Port aux Basques on the arrival of Monday's express.

GOES INTO BUSINESS.—Mr. M. Mulhoney, purser of the S. S. Fogota, resigned that position last trip and will go into business for himself at his native place, Indian Arm. B.B. Mr. Mulhoney, who was an obliging and competent official, is succeeded by Mr. R. Elliott, of Change Islands.

GONE INTO DEEP WATER.—Private advice received in the city to-day, from Greenspond, say that an effort was made yesterday to tow the stranded s.s. Earl of Devon off the rocks, but that she slid into still deeper water and this will render the permanent re-floating of the ship still more difficult.

CHURCH PARADE.—The members of the Star of the Sea Society will parade to the 8 o'clock Mass in the R. C. Cathedral on Sunday next when all including the officers will receive Holy Communion. A meeting will be held the latter part of the month to arrange for the season's series of entertainments. Lectures will again be a prominent feature of these.

OBITUARY.—The death occurred this morning, at her residence, Fleming Street, of Mrs. Sarah Cairnes, wife of Mr. Jno. Cairnes. The deceased who was in her 79th year, was a woman of kindly and affable disposition, a kind mother and good wife and neighbor. The deceased leaves to mourn her a husband and 4 sons and 3 daughters to whom the Telegram extends its sympathy in their bereavement.

On Second Thought.

Another thing that is badly needed is a watermelon with a handle.

If you proceed upon the theory that it pays to be square you will have nothing to regret if you fail to collect. To most of us the remarkable thing about Julius Rosenwald's birthday bequests is that he had the money.

Another way for a man to achieve a reputation for cleverness and ability is to drink too much. It is said of every drunkard that he would make a great success if he could let liquor alone.

A college professor has arisen to explain the mystery of the curve ball. Which is all right. But if you need curves in your business you will have to learn to throw them yourself.

In a country neighborhood a man is considered able if he can pass the examination required for a teacher's certificate. Do not attach too much importance to distinction. A man can achieve a certain degree of it by becoming the father of an eighteen-pound baby.

The fact that a "dog sticks to its master" is, in many cases, no credit to its intelligence.
