A Millionaire's Countess Westerleigh

CHAPTER XLIII.

"Yes," said Nora, with rather a curious smile. "If he does not recognize me, no one will. Do you know"—she laughed a little shamefacedly—"I'm a wee bit disappointed; the baby and I were such good friends."

In another minute or two the carriage pulled up at the door of Westleigh House. It flew open, and Milly, almost leaving her father's arm, stood with outstretched arms to greet her restored friend.

After dinner that evening, after the four had talked as if they had been parted for years instead of months, Vane went up to his room and put on his overcoat.

He had been thinking a great deal during the meal, notwithstanding the chatter, and his thoughts had been concentrated on the subject of Nora's fears.

He felt certain that not one of the "boys," or the other persons who had met "Ernest Mortimer," would recognize the Countess of Westleigh as that attractive young man.

Lady Florence was lured in Russia; and, indeed, if she had been still moving in London society, there were reasons why she should remain silent.

But there was one other person who knew of the "Ernest Mortimer" episode in Nora's life, one who had used it for his own base purposes.

Who might chance to do so again. That other person was Senley Tyers, the false friend; the Judas, whom Vane had spared at Nora's entreaty.

He had seen nothing of him since the day before that on which Vane and Lady Florence were to have been married, had heard nothing of

GIRL SUFFERED TERRIBLY

At Regular Intervals—Says Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured her.

Adrian, Texas.—"I take pleasure in adding my testimonial to the great list of cures and hope that it will be of interest to suffering women. For four years I suffered untold agonies at regular intervals. Such pains and cramps, severe chills and sickness at stomach, then finally hemorrhages until I would be nearly blind. I had five doctors and none of them could do more than relieve me for a time.

"I saw your advertisement in a paper and decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took seven boxes of it and used two bottles of the Sanative Wash, and I am completely cured of my trouble. When I began taking the Compound I only weighed ninety-six pounds and now I weigh one hundred and twenty-six pounds. If anyone wishes to address me in person I will cheerfully answer all letters, as I cannot speak too highly of the Pinkham remedies."—Miss JESSIE MARSH, Adrian, Texas.

Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (containing) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

skeleton hand on Vane's shoulder, he pointed to the blotched canvas with the other. "Look! Isn't she lovely? Was there ever, since God first made woman as a scourge for us, a lovelier face? And she is to be mine. Mine! mine!" He thrust his face close to Vane's. "I'll tell you how, Vane. Tempest—she loves him. But you know that. You are Vane, aren't you? Of course you know. Now don't you think I'm clever? Don't you think she'll wish she'd taken that handkerchief?"

WEDDED AT LAST!

CHAPTER II.

"It is only for a minute, dear," she said, trying to speak lightly. "Anything of that kind made me sick and giddy even in my best days. I shall be all right in a moment."

"Can I be of any assistance?" said a deep rich voice close to Shirley. "This is rather a formidable descent for an invalid."

Shirley turned quickly and saw that the gentleman who was addressing her was a tall, broad-shouldered man of thirty or thereabouts, wearing a loose fur-lined travelling-coat, and looking altogether a very distinguished personage. He had been watching, with a pitying look in his dark-gray eyes, the progress of Shirley and her mother from the train, but he had not dared to offer his assistance until he saw that it was needed. As Shirley raised her eyes to his, she felt a thrill of gratitude which brightened her face.

"Thank you," she said earnestly, "you are very good. My mother is an invalid, and—"

"I am sure she does not like the idea of this descent," he said cheerily. "This ladder is so narrow that it does not admit of two abreast, or I would ask her to accept my arm; but, if she will allow me to carry her—I am very strong, and for some years I was accustomed to carrying an invalid sister."

"You are very good," Shirley repeated hesitatingly, "but I ought not to trouble you."

"It will be no trouble," he said earnestly and kindly. "Pray allow me," he added, bending over Mrs. Ross, and speaking in a very winning voice. "I will be very careful."

"Thank you," she responded, with a smile which lighted up her pale face and made it beautiful exceedingly. "I shall be very much obliged. I am so weak and nervous."

"Not at all," he said gently. "Will you go first," he added to Shirley, "and lead the way to the ladies' cabin?"

As he spoke, he lifted Mrs. Ross lightly and easily, as if she had been a child, and followed Shirley as she went down to the ladies' cabin, presently placing his burden carefully on a couch.

"You must let me have the same pleasure when we arrive at the end of our voyage," he said, in the dearest voice which seemed to carry strength and support to poor Shirley with every word. "Is there anything more I can do for you?" he added, bending over Mrs. Ross for a moment.

Radway's Ready Relief

NEURALGIA

The Relief is the best counter irritant known, and therefore the best preparation that can be used in Neuralgia. Rub it on the part affected, and keep the part moist with it. The seat of the pain will ease in a few minutes, which will usually be in the course of ten or fifteen minutes.

Cruelty to Animals.

Teamsters and horse owners generally are complaining bitterly of the condition of Water Street, and direct the attention of the Inspector for Cruelty to Animals to it. They claim that it is a great hardship on horses drawing heavy loads along that thoroughfare. Since the advent of snow the Reid Company, through their street car sweeper, have sprinkled sand and salt all over the belt line for the purpose of preventing as much as possible their street railway from being interrupted, but to the detriment of horsemen. As already mentioned, this material is a great impediment to horse traffic. The Cruelty to Animals Society, through Inspector Balfour, should take prompt action in this matter and not have our public streets a mere convenience for railways.

Healthy and Unhealthy Lighting.

Gas, it may be said, vitiates the atmosphere. True. But it also helps to purify it. Its purifying power is greater than its vitiating power. Electricity does not vitiate, nor does it purify. Hear what three eminent men have said: "Much evidence has lately been adduced to show that gas is more useful than the electric light in promoting efficient ventilation of air. It is for this, amongst other reasons, that gas is being frequently substituted for the electric light. The latest example is, perhaps, the Society of Medical Officers of Health, which has recently installed gas on its premises, after experience with the electric light.—Dr. Jamieson B. Hurry.

He would merely add, that no member who had experience of their meeting room under the old conditions could deny the improvement that had taken place since gas had been substituted for the electric light and the new system of heating and ventilation had been installed.—Dr. Reginald Duffell, before the Society of Medical Officers of Health.

I have my mind's eye, at the moment, a hall which, in the old days, was lighted by gas, and in which a large audience could, with comfort, sit through an hour's lecture, or with pleasure through a three hours' dinner, but which with the march of civilization, had its illumination changed from gas to electricity. The latter been employed with all the latest refinements to effect the lighting under the best conditions, with the result that any large gathering within its walls leads to a state little short of apoplexy.—Vivian B. Lewes, Professor of Chemistry at the Royal Naval College, Greenwich.—Nov. 14

Adamo Brothers Shot to Death.

Detroit, Nov. 24.—Vito and Salvatore Adamo, brothers, were shot to death to-day, the assassin using a sawed-off shot gun. The two men were found lying in a street in the Italian colony, but residents of the vicinity declared to the police they heard no shots fired. The weapon was found nearby. This is the fourth shooting of a similar nature in Detroit's "Little Italy" in two weeks, though the victims of the previous assaults were not fatally injured, and all are attributed by the police to a feud of long standing.
