CAPE TOWN, Jan. 11.

In the course of an outbreak yesterday, seven native laborers in the diamond mines were killed and 30 wounded. A few whites also received injuries. The trouble had no connection whatever with the railway strike. It arose in a dispute about the death of a Basuto, which was said to have resulted from the kick of a white man. The whites were driven into a tunnel of the mine, where they defended themselves. In the meantime the natives destroyed the huts in the compound. A body of 500 whites then came on the scene, and dispersed the natives after a sharp fight. The town is now under control of detachments of armed farmers from the surrounding country, who are supported by a small force of regular troops. The authorities in mobilizing the forces, are looking toward much greater danger than that of the strike, however, for they fear a possible uprising by thousands of native laborers in the mines, some of whom have already shown signs of unruliness and are likely to become more intractable and start trouble when they learn that provisions are running short, owing to impeded communications in Natal. All the infantry, cavalry and artillery comprised in the forces of the Union of South Africa, are mobilized. All the white force available at Bloemfontein, capital of the Orange State, have been sent to Jagersfontein, where the diamond mines rank in value next to those of Kimberley, and where the native laborers have adopted a threatening attitude. Some further arrests of labor leaders were made yesterday morning.

LONDON, Jan. 11.

In view of the official confirmation of the death of King Meilik, considerable interest is aroused as to the future of Abyssinia. From time to time, during recent years, fears have been expressed that complications would arise in the event of his death. Britain has considerable interest in the preservation of order, especially in view of the large number of British subjects, mainly east Indians engaged in Abyssinia. Moreover, the country is in a large measure surrounded by British territory, and protects, the chief exceptions being French and Italian Somaliland. An interesting step regarding British jurisdiction over the subjects in Abyssinia was announced in an order-in-council published in the London Gazette, declaring the establishment of British consular courts in Abyssinia. The jurisdiction of the courts will be confined to British subjects and foreigners. In certain specified cases the courts will deal with both civil and criminal matters and will be held by councillors and officers appointed by the Consul-General, who may himself visit, in a magisterial or judicial capacity, any place in Abyssinia, to hear cases.

TORONTO, Jan. 11.

Following a suggestion by the Hon. W. J. Hanna, that the Government might go into the fishing business in order to break the monopoly of the Fish Trust, representations have been made by some fishermen that the Government might regulate the price at which fish should be sold. The Trust, they say, is holding up the price. One suggestion is that the Provincial Government might impose an export duty on fish.

Holy Cross Extension.

A meeting of the Holy Cross Building Committee was held yesterday. Mr. John Barron occupying the chair. The reports submitted showed that considerable progress had been made by the contractors, but to finish the building as stipulated in the contract, more funds are necessary. The total amount collected to date is $1,900 and the sum of $4,000 is still needed, which the committee propose to raise as soon as possible, to have the annex completed.

The Day's Work.

The day's work counts—
It isn't what you mean to do a week ahead;
It isn't what you know you'll gain
When all annoyances have fled:
It isn't what you dreamed and planned—
Such hopes are but a phantom band—
The day's work counts.

The day's work counts—
The foot you gained
Since yonder sun dispelled the dark,
Next week, next month, next year
are vain—
Unto the present, summons hark;
How have you fared ahead since morn
in garnering life's oil and corn?
The day's work counts.

The day's work counts—
It isn't much
The gain of those few painful hours;
But be content if there is shown
Some product of those sacred powers
Which guide each mind, uphold each hand.
Strive with the best at your command—
The day's work counts.

In Memoriam.

Mrs. Catherine Woodford, proprietress of Woodford's, and widow of the late Michael Woodford, died at the residence of her niece, Mrs. Patrick Quinlan, North Arm, Holyrood, Wednesday night. The deceased had high advanced to her ninetieth year and was in possession of all her faculties. She enjoyed good health till three months ago when physical infirmity and old age compelled her to take to her bed. The late Mr. and Mrs. Woodford were in opulence and prominence in the early days of the N. F. Railway and all travellers of that time know of the proverbial hospitality enjoyed at Woodford's. She was Postmistress, too, and carried on a large and profitable business till old age forced retirement. Pious and charitable, kind and hospitable, Mrs. Woodford possessed such parts as made her loved and esteemed by all—the poor especially have lost a friend whose sentiment is that a good woman has gone to the better land. Her funeral took place from her late residence to the Church of Holy Cross and included a large number of sympathizing relatives and friends. High Mass and Office were chanted for the repose of her soul by Right Rev. Monsignor Veitch and Rev. W. P. Finn and Rev. R. M. Shean, after which the funeral again reformed and proceeded to Holy Cross Cemetery where her remains were placed in the family plot beside those of her late husband. May her soul rest in peace and may her sorrowing sons and daughters accept our heartfelt sympathy.—Com.

Dieting.

When ailments through your system buzz, and aches are running riot, the first thing that the doctor does has reference to your diet. He asks you what you like to eat, his face all stern and wooden; you tell him fish and fowl and meat, and pie and cake pudding. "Cut out all that," you hear him say; "no wonder that you totter! You'll eat a bran mash every day, and nothing drink but water." No matter what my trouble is, when I go to the sawbones, he hands me out the same old bit from grim, unyielding jawbones. "Cut out the pie, cut out the cake," I always hear him mutter, "if you would shed your pesky ache, cut out the cheese and butter." I diet for the jumping gout, I diet for lumbago; I have to cut the good things out, and live on rice and sago; I'm fond of grub that's good and rich, that in the stomach tingles; but I must diet for the itch, and diet for the shingles. I'm living now on horse's fare (that's why I weep the briny), attempting to restore some hair to my old scalp so shiny. I wonder why the blooming docs don't change their medication? They now accept a patient's rocks and then prescribe starvation.
