DEATH OF FINANCIER WHO WAS A FRIEND OF KINGS.

The death is announced of the Right Hon, Sir Ernest Cassel, the millionaire philanthropist, a friend of kings, and one of the most remarkable figures among the greatest financiers of the world. Born in Cologne, and of Jewisin parents, he came to England as youth, and rose from a clerk in Liverpool office at 12s a week to become the master mind in many of the greatest schemes of high national finance, his fortune, ten years ago, when he retired from City life, being estimated at £10,000,000. Sir Earnest gave very freely to charity, and his total benefactions amounted to close upon £2,000,000. He was also a wellknown figure on the Turf.

During the war objection was taken to his membership of the Privy Council on the ground of German birth and Jewish parentage, but the decision was in his favour.

One of his most able financial achievements was the amalgamation of the Vickers-Maxim Company with the Naval Construction Company at Barrow-in-Furnness, and the extraordinary financial genius he displayed gradually attracted many large capitalists towards him. Perhaps his greatest work, however, was his share n the construction of the Assuan Dam on the Nile.

Sir Earnest Cassel himself asserted that he never made any struggle for wealth; it came quite naturally and formally to him as a result of his capacity for seeing further ahead than nost men, for discovering undevelop-Bridges Damaged. ed financial possibilities which other people do not see. One of the financial possibilities which he thus saw was lished with Bonavista, and the Reid the advent of the "Tube" railway in Newfoundland Company received the London, and he was largely responfollowing message last night, telling sible for the existence of the "Central

Sir Ernest was a great friend of the late King Edward, to whom he bore some resemblance. Among his friends he was called cwing to this likeness, "Windsor Castle." A good story in this connection is told of a well-known peer who, at a garden arty at Windsor, thought he saw Sir Messages from New Melbourne, T. Ernest sitting in a chair.
