Canada and Britain Stand Together.

Sir Henry Thornton's Last Mes- sage on Leaving England.

Sir Henry Thornton, who has been General Manager of the Great Eastern Railway since 1914, is leaving for Southampton for Canada tomorrow (Wednesday 22nd) to take up his new duties as President of the Canadian National Railways. In response to a request for a message before leaving England, Sir Henry informed a press representative that he had one and the same piece of advice for Canadians and for the people in this country, and that was that they should trade together more and work in harmony with each other. "The Great War," he said, "did much to dispel our inferiority, and every day it becomes more evident that the commercial interests of Britain and the Dominions lie in the same direction. It is incumbent on all of us to recognize the vital necessity of turning the spirit of brotherhood and patriotism into practical use. We must avoid these internal dissensions that have brought about the downfall of great Empires in the past. This applies to political and commercial affairs alike. "Canada and the United Kingdom have commercial interests in common. The more we trade amongst each other, the more we shall promote our national wealth, although this should by no means exclude the intensive but profitable business with other nations. Let us at first build up as much trade as we can for ourselves, within our own Empire, and as much more as possible with the foreigner.

LASTING RESULTS EXPECTED.

"The British Empire Exhibition offers an admirable opportunity for the manufacturers and business people of the Empire to become acquainted with the products produced by each member of the Commonwealth, and the opportunities for trade. Missions of representative traders from each country usually and unfortunately begin and end in dinners and after-dinner speeches, but the exhibits and demonstrations which will be actually shown at Wembley should produce a lasting result. "Perhaps one of the most important effects of the British Empire Exhibition is the help it will give in solving the problem of the development of a suitable population for the Dominion of Canada. A special section of the Exhibition which deals with the subject of emigration and overseas settlement will do more to find suitable settlers than the normal efforts of half a century could accomplish. "Districts will be labeled for stock-raising, grain-growing or mixed farming, and so on. A vivid conception of Canadian life and opportunity will be presented, so that the prospective settler will gain some conception of what his life in the new country will be, and the rewards which await industry and intelligence.

MILLIONS OF IDLE ACRES.

"It is said that there are in Canada 20 million acres of unoccupied lands within from ten to fifteen miles of the railways. Ten millions of these areas are held in Western Canada, and no province of the Dominion offers greater advantages in soil and climate than British Columbia. It seems almost tragic that the right kind of immigrants from Britain have thus far ignored the opportunities which await them in the land of sunshine and plenty; so I trust that both the Dominion and Britain will support the Exhibition because I believe to do so is to promote Imperial development."

Story of a Girl Who Weds a Millionaire.

REMARKABLE FILM AT THE NICK-EL TO-MORROW.

The great film "Heliotrope" will be shown at the Nickel-to-morrow. The following is the story in brief: Alice Hale (Hasdack) is being educated at a convent. She believes she is an orphan. Spending her vacation at the home of her cousin, Mabel Andrews, daughter of a millionaire, Olive meets Mabel's brother, Jimmie, and they become engaged. Alice's father "Heliotrope Harry" Hasdack is serving a sentence in the penitentiary. His nickname was derived from a fondness for heliotrope perfume. Alice does not know of his existence, but his thoughts and love are constantly with her.

"Heliotrope Harry" receives word from his pal, "Spike" Foley, that Mollie Hasdack, "Heliotrope's" wayward wife, is planning to blackmail Alice and her millionaire fiancé with the revelation that Alice's father is a convict. Then he pleads for a pardon and it is granted, after he gives his word that he will do no harm to Mollie Hasdack. But he trails her from one place to another without her knowledge, managing, however, always to keep her apprised by the scent of heliotrope, that he is not far off. She fears for her life, and when her terror finally brings her to the point of desperation, "Heliotrope Harry" allows her to get a glimpse of him, knowing that she will shoot to kill. She does so, and for his murder is given a life term in the penitentiary, which, of course, prevents her carrying out any scheme to injure her daughter.

Canny.

A clever man went to a solicitor, and before him a question, and asked him if he would undertake the case. "Certainly," replied the solicitor, "I will readily undertake the case. We are sure to win."

"So you really think it is a good case?"

"Most decidedly, my dear sir. I am prepared to guarantee that you will secure a favourable verdict."

"Oh, well, I'm much obliged to you, but I don't think I'll go to law this time, for, you see, the case I've before you is my opponent's."

QUITE AS TRYING.

Self-pity is a fault that I have had a great deal to put up with and I think she has more courage and cheerfulness than nine people out of ten would have in the circumstances. Unquestionably a good deal more than the woman who criticized her would have!

But the woman who criticized her is one of those people who don't like to have their sympathies appealed to. Someone had spoken sympathetically of the other woman, and she promptly discounted the other's claim to sympathy by alleging that she was a self-pityer.

Queer how people do hate to be asked to give sympathy! Sometimes it seems as if they minded it almost as much as giving money. Sympathy is the opposite of advice, being something everyone wishes to get and no one wishes to give.

So Simple!

Many people have a habit of protective thinking whereby they throw out of their minds any facts that, if accepted, would lay claim to their sympathy. I have heard people like this declare that nobody really needed to be poor, that poverty was always a result of laziness or criminality.

Now self-pity is a phrase that this class of people cottons to very readily—to describe the other person, of course. And they apply it in season and out.

No matter how heavy the other person's burdens and troubles and discouragements, any mention of them, any appearance of being overborne by them, is self-pity.

That's Different!

Their own discouragements—oh, that's another matter. No one understands their position and how much they have to stand. They aren't pitying themselves when they speak of such things they are simply stating facts.

Yes, self-pity is a very disagreeable fault, and very hard to stand. But the habit of imputing self-pity to everyone who craves a little natural sympathy for hardships or discouragements is also a very disagreeable fault and very hard to stand.

Every one should either drink a quart of milk a day or consume its equivalent of protein in cheese, junket, cocoa, etc.

WEDDED BLISS.

At Doorn the shelf-worn bridegroom dwells, and can't from gloom emerge; the echoes of his wedding bells are sadder than a dirge. All wearily his horn he decks in garb of princely taste, and struts while leering rubber-necks are gazing through the gate; there's no one now to cringe and bend, to flatter or to praise; in all the world he has no friend to wish him happy days. He puts his helmet on his head, the one with flowing plumes, and looks like one who's doomed to tread between long rows of tombs. The saddest bridegroom of all time, he walks the paths of Doorn, and thinks, perhaps, about the crime that made the millions mourn. "Ach, Wilhelm," says his gracious frau, "what's eating you, old scout? There is a pink sweat on his brow, your hand's as cold as kraut; and in the night you wake and scream like one who is accused; is it remorse that breaks your dream, or too much liver-wurst?" The bridegroom goes through stately forms with panoply replete, but nothing in such grandeur warm his wintry heart or feet. The shadows on the castle walls, the shadows on the hill; and no one in the whole world calls, "Hurrah for Good Old Bill!"

Large and small Turkish towels are always a welcome gift to the housewife. She cannot have too many of them.
