The Young Liberal Club have vacated their old club rooms in Strong's Block, and the committee is now busy getting the new ones in the Oddfellows' Hall in shape. The new apartments will be the most comfortable and commodious club rooms in the city, and will be ready in about one week. Five years ago yesterday Mr. Wm. Mills, of the Hinton-Mills Company, sent a large sheet of paper to a distant friend with the words "April fool" emblazoned on its center. Yesterday the same piece of paper, bearing the same legend, found its way through the post to Mr. Mills' address. The revenge was slow but sure.

If you had followed the crowd yesterday it would have led you to Rickert Bros.' old stand, 174 Dundas street, where the bankrupt sale is going on. The store was filled to the doors all the afternoon. So much so, as to hardly leave room for the Italian harpers, who were in attendance. It was the topic of the street and expressions such as "Things are going remarkably cheap," or "Have you been to W. L. Graham's sale?" were frequently heard from passers-by. Go and get some of the plums.

"Good morning," said a Police Court official to a reporter as the latter stood at the door of the police station watching the day's contingent of offenders file out, "have you noticed how few there are now that go to jail in default of a fine? That's the surest sign of spring we have. Even the oldest and apparently the most indifferent of our callers have a desire to bask in the cheerful rays of Old Sol, and you will be surprised how easily they can raise the needful when they wish. The nominal fine, and even a $5 assessment has no terrors for them. The opening months of spring are always the best, financially, with us. None of the prisoners will go to jail without a struggle then."

Mrs. Annie Madden was charged by William Beaton at the Police Court this morning with being drunk and disorderly. Mrs. Madden and her husband, who live on Pall Mall street, like their drop of "bitters." They are frequently before the Magistrate when the sober one of the couple will invariably pay the other's fine. When Annie's name was called the Magistrate announced that he would send her where she would get sober, and fined her $5 or twenty days. At this her spouse came briskly around to the counsel's table with the remark; "I guess Annie is worth $5 to me," and proceeded to unload his greenbacks. Having paid the required amount, he addressed himself to his wife and said, "Come along, Annie," and the couple sauntered out of the court-room arm in arm.

The Freeman Inquest.

The coroner's jury met at Ferguson's morgue last evening to investigate the causes of the death of Fannie Freeman, the young woman found in the river on Monday evening. After viewing the remains they adjourned to meet on Thursday evening in the Court House. The jury is composed of Coroner Smith, Messrs. Thomas Brunton (foreman), Jases Sparksman, Thomas Magoey, J. Bartz, Hamilton Ramsey, Vining Conley, William Peters, J. F. Hicks, Wm. Ward, Wm. Payne, Alex. Arbuckle, James Spry, Henry Geiger, E. Pudney, J. Hood, Richard Giese and Robert Gesh. A post-mortem examination was made by Dr. Waugh and Dr. Mitchell after the adjournment of the jury.
