BUTTER AND EGGS WERE LITTLE HIGHER

Both Were Scarce Today on Local Market and the Demand Was Very Strong.

There was only a very small market There was a strong demand for butter and eggs, but they were practically unprocurable, save in very small lots, and as a result the prices tended to advance. One Mst. P.&SS. M.

buyer paid 30c a dozen for fresh eggs, and in wholesale lots they were selling for 28c by the case and 23c by the basket.

Vegetables were fairly plentiful and sold extremely welf. Lettuce was in great demand at 40c a dozen, and a few new onions were offered at the same figure. Radishes at 5c a bunch and rhubarb at 10c, sold well, though there was only a comparatively small amount offered. Cabbages, turnips and potatoes were the most plentiful commodities the latter being specially in evidence. Potatoes sold by the load at 50c a bag, and as high as ing specially in evidence. Potatoes sold by the load at 50c a bag, and as high as 60c and 65c for individual bags.

The Apple Suoply.

There was quite a supply of apples offered, of very good quality, but the demand for them did not seem to be very beick.

A Peculiar Feature. A peculiar feature of the disease of hydrophobia, according to the statement of the doctor, was that it was first likely to make its appearance five days after the bite. If it did not appear then it would not lively give evidence of its presence until the ninth day, and not then again till the eleventh day. Also it is a peculiar fact that a patient bitten in the hand or arm is more subject to the disease
